WEATHER.

Forecast for Ohio—Colder; northwesterly winds and generally fair weather, except local snows on Lake Erie; colder and fair Tuesday.

For Illinois and Indiana—Colder; fair weather to-day and Tuesday.

For Michigan and Wisconsin—Colder; northwesterly winds and generally fair, except flurries of snow along the lake shore; colder and fair Tuesday.

The low on storm center which was over Toledo yesterday and last night has moved eastward and is now central over northern New York and St. Lawrence valley. The movement of this "low" is very slow.

The temperature in the northwest is falling over the border is ranges from zero to 10 below. The zero temperature line in the United States passes through Dakitas, northwestern Nebraska, and western Minnesota. The presence of the "low" in this vicinity will delay the advance of the cold wave by probably twenty-four hours and will favor snowfall. No very great drop in temperature is expected at this point. The reduction will be about twenty degrees in the next 48 hours. The lowest temperature in the United States is 6 below zero at Huron, Dak., the highest is 68 at New Orleans. The highest in Toledo yesterday was 55 degrees, the same temperature and character of weather as occurred on last New Year's day. The minimum temperature tonight will probably reach twenty degrees above zero at Toledo.

LIONS GUARD THE DOORS.

Colorado Ranchmen Besieged by Beasts.

The Herders Have to Go Constantly Armed to Protect Their Flocks —Terrible Battle.

Aspen, Col., Feb. 8.—This section of Colorado is experiencing one of the severest winters known for years. The mountains have been covered to a great depth with snow since the 20th of September, and the weather has been extremely cold since the beginning of winter. This has driven all kinds of game down into the valleys.

Large herds of deer and elk are frequently seen upon the valley ranches, but as a general thing they are so poor as to render them unfit for food.

The mountain lions, however, are making life a burden to the ranchmen, and in some locations it is decidedly dangerous to be in the open air after nightfall.

They have become so bold that to go about unarmed is an indiscretion that few are guilty of even in broad daylight, and the majority of ranchers are compelled to guard their stock night and day.

The lions are vicious in the extreme, being nearly starved to death, and instead of turning tail and scampering off to the mountains, as is generally the case when approached in broad daylight, they not only stand their ground but are always on the offensive.

A few days ago John Wilson, who resides on Brush Creek, about six miles below Aspen, was hooking up his team preparatory to bringing a load of grain to Aspen, when his attention was attracted to a large lion couched at the foot of a haystack which stood in the barnyard and within about ten feet of him.

He states that the animal was preparing to spring upon him or the team, and the sight made his hair stand and blood run cold.

He pulled a revolver, of which he had two in his belt, and fired, but owing to his sudden fright the aim was not accurate, and the ball passed over the beast. This so angered the lion that it immediately sprang upon Mr. Wilson, bearing him to the earth with terrific force.

Fortunately the firing of the revolver called to his aid two large dogs, who came tearing into the yard just as the ferocious beast sprang upon their master, and they set upon the animal, attracting its attention before it had time to fasten its teeth in the flesh of the prostrate man.

Then there was a conglomeration of man, dogs and lion for a few seconds that would be hard to describe. Mr. Wilson soon succeeded in extricating himself from his dangerous predicament, and watching his chance fired another shot, striking the beast over the temple, but apparently injuring it but slightly, and the fight between the dogs and his lionship waxed warmer.

Another shot was impossible now, for fear of killing one or both dogs. Mrs. Wilson appeared on the scene at this juncture, armed with a Winchester rifle, but was unable to bring it into use for the same reason.

Wilson finally grabbed up a neckyoke and succeeded in crushing in the skull of the lion by a few well-directed blows.

The beast was found to be an old fellow, and measured eight feet from the point of his nose to the tip of his tail. He was so poor that only skin and bones remained. The carcass was thrown on the load of grain and brought to town, where it attracted a large amount of attention owing to its enormous size.

Mr. Wilson's left arm was considerably lacerated in the encounter and one of the dogs came out of the fight with a broken leg. Two of Mr. Wilson's little children had been playing with a small sled in the yard where the fight took place but a short time before the lion was discovered. Mr. Wilson states that it is no uncommon sight to see these lions along the small water courses, but this is the first instance in which they have come into his very yard.

When it becomes necessary for the children to cross the threshold of the door now Mrs. Wilson stands in the doorway armed with a loaded Winchester.

TO BURN THE PALACE.

Incendiaries Bound to Raze the Royal Structure.

Berlin, Feb. 8.—Another attempt was made to-day to set fire to the royal castle at Konigsberg. As in the previous attempt, the main tower was selected as the place in which to start the conflagration, and the time chosen was about 8 o'clock in the evening.

As on the occasion of the first attempt the damage done was slight. No arrests have been made in connection with either attempt. In both cases the incendiary poured kerosene over the woodwork of the tower and then set a light to it.

TAKEN A CAPTIVE.

Blaine is Caged Under Grandpa's Hat.

The Man From Maine Declines to Run.

What Has Caused This Change of Front?

Does the Astute Secretary of State

Read the Handwriting on the Wall, or is He, as Generally Believed, a Man Broken in Health—His Letter and the Comment.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The following explains itself:

Washington, Feb. 6, 1892.

Hon. J. S. Clarkson, Chairman Republican National Committee:

My Dear Sir: I am not a candidate for the presidency and my name will not go before the republican national convention for the nomination. I make this announcement in due season.

To those who have tendered me their support I owe sincere thanks and am most grateful for their confidence. They will, I am sure, make earnest effort in the approaching contest, which is rendered especially important by reason of the industrial and financial policies of the government being at stake. The popular decision on these issues is of great moment and will be of far-reaching consequence.

Very sincerely yours,
JAMES G. BLAINE.

THE CHICAGO PRESS.

The Herald and Tribune Take Opposite Views.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—The Herald this morning says: "The popular conception of James G. Blaine's character will manifest itself to-day in the question which will be very generally propounded: Does he mean what he says in his letter to Mr. Clarkson announcing that he will not go before the republican convention for the nomination?

"Singularly enough, if we are to judge from the past, the men who will most strenuously seek to convey the impression that Mr. Blaine says one thing in this communication and means another will be his warmest supporters. He alone among public men in America is admired for his craft, for his smartness, and for his tricks, and it will be difficult to convince the conscienceless throng that has followed for so long a time his devious paths, that this latest expression means what the words imply.

"The Herald does not imagine that the brief note to Mr. Clarkson will quiet the demand from this element of the republican party that Mr. Blaine become the candidate.

"Some disclaimer from him was necessary if he expected to remain in Mr. Harrison's cabinet. The intrigues of himself and his friends have gone as far as it was possible for them to go while he retained in the president's official household a post heretofore supposed to demand all of the occupant's loyalty and devotion to his chief.

"The Clarkson letter comes, therefore, too late to be regarded as spontaneous and wholly sincere, and its most general interpretation will be along the lines which its author had made familiar to the people.

"The letter now in hand, is, in Blaine's own expressive language, "an anchor to windward," for it will be expected to cover a vast amount of campaigning hereafter, but it will not be widely regarded as an honest disavowal of an ambition which has brought innumerable embarrassments and more than one defeat upon the republican party.

"In other words Mr. Blaine's statements now, and in future, will be accepted for what they may be worth. We may expect to know their true meaning and their real object when the particular emergency that brought them forth has become a matter of history."

The Tribune.

The Tribune says: "The announcement is definite and unequivocal, and those who believe in Mr. Blaine sufficiently to wish that he might be the candidate may accept his words as final.

"We expect to hear from those who are accustomed to annoy Mr. Blaine with reflections upon his candor that his letter means something different from what it seems to mean.

"We shall be told by these interpreters of subtleties that Mr. Blaine might have chose plainer language, that he might have said he 'would not accept the nomination if should be tendered to him,' or that he 'did not wish his name to be considered by the convention under any circumstances,' and so on.

"But it is scarcely worth while now to argue with those who claim no distinction except that arising from their association as friends or enemies with Mr. Blaine's past political career.

"His wise supporters will accept his letter as having been written without reserve and they will not impute insincerity to him, because he has never yet learned how to be ungracious."

Times.

The Times says: It has long been believed, and the letter shows the belief was well founded, that an understanding has existed between Harrison and Blaine regarding the nomination of 1892.

"Having centered in himself the opposition to Harrison, Blaine will bow him into the nomination. The whitehouse management has been too shrewd for the favorite sons. It has caught them all in the Blaine fly-paper and left them struggling hopelessly.

"The Minneapolis nominee will be the present tenant of the white house. Mr. Blaine was a willing stalking horse."

ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

The News Received With Sorrow Among Republicans.

San Francisco, Feb. 8.—Blaine's letter was a bombshell in the camp of the republicans here, the great majority of whom have taken no stock in the repeated dispatches from the east that he would retire from the presidential race.

Blaine has no more enthusiastic following than the California republicans. They have stayed by him through thick and thin. It was a bitter pill when they had to accept Harrison. They have been claiming for months that Blaine was the man to lead the party to victory and his withdrawal is a heavy blow. Harrison has never been popular here. Even his visit did nothing to help him politically. In fact, the republicans here thought it had injured him because he made so poor an impression.

Among people at large it will be regretted still more, as Blaine was the idol of the Californians and would have secured a heavy vote; many democrats preferred him to any man in their own party. Among the democratic politicians the news of Blaine's actual retirement was received with joy, as all who talked on the subject last night held that there is no man in the republican ranks except him who is formidable, or who can defeat either Hill or Cleveland.

ALGER AGAINST HARRISON.

The General Fiengs Surprise at the Turn In Affairs.

Detroit, Feb. 8.—(Special)—When the above dispatch was read to Gen. Alger at his home last night, he expressed surprise at its tenor.

He had seen Mr. Blaine recently at Washington, and although the general refused to repeat what the secretary then told him, it is evident he announced himself as a candidate—hence the general's surprise.

Gen. Alger refused to talk about his own prospects as a candidate for the presidential nomination.

He refused also to make any prophecy as to who stood the best chance of winning the coveted prize.

He hoped and believed there would a number of candidates in the field.

This sentiment will be accepted as being in line with the general's known opposition to Harrison. Such a condition would also make the general a darker horse than ever.

THE NEW YORK PRESS.

The Times Rather Thinks Blaine Showed Good Sense.

New York, Feb. 8.—Referring to the withdrawal of Mr. Blaine from the candidacy for the presidency, the World says: "The real leader declines to lead. For a second time in his career James G. Blaine puts aside a presidential nomination that would, without question, be his if he would accept it. He is the strongest man and would be the strongest candidate for his party.

"Crowning his other services to his country he has recently won a conspicuous victory for honor against the brutal bluster of imitation jingoism and the cold-blooded scheming of selfish politicians."

The Times says: "Whatever other motives he may have had in making this announcement in due season, there is not much room for doubt that his chief and determining move was his conviction that he could not be elected, if he were nominated, and next to that his opinion—possibly his hope—that Mr. Harrison could not be elected either."

The Sun makes no comment.

Herald and Tribune.

New York, Feb. 8.—The Herald this morning says: "Mr. James G. Blaine has declared over his signature that he will not be a candidate for the presidency in the approaching battle of the parties.

"This eliminates from the political campaign a very important element. So far as the republicans are concerned, it may be said, without fear of contradiction, that they have lost their strongest man. By all odds Mr. Blaine was the most available leader.

"As to the democrats their shrewdest opponent has retired from the field. They have a large number of men who can certainly win against Harrison and who ought to win against Blaine. If they handle their forces with skill and enter the contest with a strong man it will be their fault if they fail to carry the day, for the great bulk of the American people in all sections of the country are with them."

The Tribune says: "Mr. Blaine tells the chairman of the republican national committee, and through him the party and the country, that he is not a candidate for the presidency and that his name will not go before the Minneapolis convention.

"This formal announcement will cause sorrow and disappointment to thousands of republicans, and there is no reason for dissembling that fact. No other living American has inspired such ardent devotion, and upon no other have so many Americans longed to confer the greatest distinction within their gift.

"That is a simple and obvious truth which nobody doubts and which disparages nobody. The certainty that the foremost citizen of the country will not be the next president, and the presumption that he will never occupy that great office cannot fail to afflict a multitude of his fellow citizens with a keen sense of personal grief."

The Tribune will say further: "What we have said already should be repeated here, that Mr. Blaine has had a perfect right to allow his name to be used in connection with the presidency while holding the office of secretary of state, and nobody has pretended to doubt his right except in the silly hope of producing discord in the republican party. General Harrison and Mr. Blaine have had no misunderstanding on that subject.

FORAKER REPUBLICANS

Are Willing To Believe Blaine Capable of Political Deceit.

Columbus, O., Feb. 8.—The news that Blaine has sent a letter to Chairman Clarkson declining to be a candidate for the republican nomination for the presidency was interesting news indeed to Ohio politicians last night.

The democrats generally seem to regard it as leaving the field clear for Harrison, and say it means that the president will be nominated again.

The Sherman faction are much pleased over the condition this leaves the work of the Minneapolis convention in, though some think Alger will come forward prominently now as a candidate.

As to the Foraker republicans the news was evidently unwelcome. Some of them said the letter to Clarkson was nothing more than would be expected from Mr. Blaine as an act of fealty to the administration, whether he would accept the nomination.

They say this brief letter will be so regarded by Blaine's friends, who will not close their work in his behalf because of it.

Others of the Foraker faction say they believe Mr. Blaine is sincere in saying he does not want the nomination, but think there is a popular demand for him to be the candidate, which he will not ignore when it is made manifest.

Nevertheless, it is plain that the letter has put a damper upon the Foraker republicans, who were preparing to take revenge upon the administration for the part it took in the recent senatorial contest, by throwing their influence to Blaine, and thus defeating Harrison. They doubt that Harrison can be defeated for the nomination by any other man.

Will Be Harrison.

Columbus, O., Feb. 8.—The announcement that Secretary Blaine had written declining to be a candidate for president caused considerable talk in political circles.

Gov. McKinley, whose name has been mentioned for the presidency, was interviewed. He said: "With Mr. Blaine out of consideration for president the republicans will unite on President Harrison. I think there will be no opposition at the Minneapolis convention to the renomination of Mr. Harrison."

SENTENCED HIM TO DIE.

Carlyle Harris Will Have to be Electrocuted.

The Murderer of His Pretty Wife will Die in the Week Beginning March 21.

New York, Feb. 8.—Carlyle W. Harris, who poisoned his young wife on February 1, 1891, and who on last Tuesday was convicted of murder in the first degree, was this morning sentenced to death by Recorder Smythe, the execution to occur during the week beginning March 21. A motion for a new trial was denied.

HE WAS READY TO DIE,

And the State Accommodated Him.

Murderer McElvaine Electrocuted To-Day.

The Condemned Man Walked Calmly to the Death Chair and Told the Officials to "Let Her Go."

Sing Sing, N. Y., Feb. 8—8 a. m.—McElvaine passed his last Sunday with the quiet that indicates resignation. He was visited by the Rev. Father Creedon, the prison priest, twice, and each time talked long and earnestly.

He showed no signs of fear or nervousness, and the viciousness of the early days of his confinement was all gone. He ate heartily at meal time, and conversed pleasantly with his keepers. His cell is No. 1 row of the dark cells just back of the hospital building. It is at the south end of the brick structure in which the death cells are located. It is the same cell he has occupied for months and is within a few paces of the door to the electrocution room.

The last farewell with his wife and two sisters was very affecting. The women arrived at the prison at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon. They were taken to the doomed man's cell a few minutes later.

McElvaine's wife is a buxom woman not over 25 years of age, with fair hair and rosy cheeks.

The elder sister, Mrs. Agnes Neville, of Brooklyn, is a tall woman with slender figure and a kindly face. She was in deep mourning, while Mrs. McElvaine wore a black dress and plush coat, and had a blue bow in her hat. The younger sister is only about 16 years old.

The women remained with McElvaine five hours. When they left all three were weeping. McElvaine was slightly moved when his wife and sisters said farewell, but he soon regained his usual composure.

While the prisoner was contemplating his approaching doom in his cell with the death watch close at hand, the physicians, experts and newspaper men were listening to a sacred concert in the warden's house. The performers were convicts, and there were many good voices among them.

Prof. L. H. Laudy, of Columbia college, who is officially designated as the electrical expert to represent the state, was present, and Dr. Samuel B. Ward arrived at 10 o'clock. Both of these men were guests of the warden over night.

Warden Brown left his comfortable rooms in the southeast corner of the prison a few minutes before 11 o'clock last night. He went direct to the cell of the doomed man and read the death warrant. McElvaine listened to the reading of the warrant without any indication that the document was of any importance to him. He did not show any sign of dread of the doom which was then fast approaching. Warden Brown said he never saw such an exhibition of nerve.

McElvaine slept soundly until 6 o'clock this morning. He ate a light breakfast and spent some time with Father Creeden in prayer. After the priest left Keeper Connaughton entered into the cell and asked if McElvaine wanted anything. "No, I'm all right," said McElvaine. "I feel first-rate, I'm ready to go at any time."

"LET HER GO."

McElvaine Walks Bravely to the Chair and Dies.

Sing Sing, N. Y., Feb. 8.—At three minutes before 11 o'clock Warden Brown called in the guard stationed at the main entrance and gave him instructions not to allow anyone to pass the dead line, for any purpose, except the witnesses, a little group of whom stood just outside in the roadway. These witnesses went into the prison and the doors were locked on them. This was the signal that the time for the execution was near at hand.

McElvaine went to his death calmly. When he was brought into the room he looked quickly about and then fixed his eyes on the chair. At a sign from the chief keeper he walked over to it and sat down.

Then he stared straight ahead of him as the deputies quickly adjusted the straps and drew them tight.

As the face strap was adjusted McElvaine grew excited and shouted "Let her go." Instantly the current of 1,700 volts was turned on and McElvaine was silenced.

Steam began to rise from the salt water in the sponges on the electrodes. The current was turned off and then applied again, as in the case of the previous executions at Sing Sing.

The first contact was at 11:11:49 and was continued for 50 1-2 seconds. It was through the head and hands. The second contact was 43 seconds later and was continued for 36 seconds.

Between the two contacts sounds resembling groans came from the victim's lips, but the physicians state that the man was dead and the sound was caused by reflex movements of the chest muscles.

After the second contact there were no sounds or movements. The body was at once taken away to be dissected.

THAYER HAS LET GO.

He Turns Over the Office to Gov. Boyd.

Finding That He Can No Longer Hold the Stolen Goods He Concludes to Give Them Up.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 8.—Last night at 10 o'clock this letter was handed to Gov. Boyd:

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 7, 1892.

Gov. Jas. S. Boyd, Omaha, Neb.:

Dear Sir: When I commenced proceedings one year ago to test your title to the office of governor, I did so in the full belief that there was great doubt in the public mind as to your citizenship and eligibility. I then took occasion to publish that as soon as your citizenship was established by the courts, I would gladly surrender the office to you.

The contest was not one of personal strife, nor to satisfy any ambition of my own but to comply with and uphold the constitution of the state.

Now that the public press has announced that the highest tribunal has declared under the constitution and laws of our country and state your rights to the office, I cheerfully yield the office of governor to you without awaiting the mandate of court.

As I am about to leave the state on Monday to be absent some weeks, it would be most convenient to me turn the office to you at 2 o'clock on that day if it is your pleasure to accept the same at that time. Very respectfully,

JOHN M. THAYER.

The letter from Gov. Thayer was handed to Gov. Boyd by a reporter, who asked Gov. Boyd if he had anything to say. The governor positively declined to be interviewed, saying simply he would go at once to Lincoln and take charge of his office.

Charles Ogden, chairman of the democratic state committee, will accompany the governor. There will be no demonstration, but on February 15 a general reception will be tendered Gov. Boyd by the democratic organization of the state.

MUCH BLOOD SPILLED.

Disgraceful Row in a Shanty Boat.

Point Pleasant, W. Va., Feb. 8.—A disreputable boathouse, kept by a woman named Morgan, was the scene of a bloody affray near here yesterday morning.

Six men were carousing at the place when Charles Knapp and John Casey became involved in a quarrel over an inmate of the house named Ora Clarke. Casey stabbed Knapp four times.

Then the entire party, four women and six men, became engaged in a free fight, knives and pistols being freely used. When the combatants were separated it was found that Casey had been mortally wounded by stab wounds inflicted by the Clarke woman and Luther Knapp, brother of Charles, had received wounds which will likely prove fatal.

John Burke was shot through the arm. All the others excepting the Clarke woman were wounded more or less severely. Ora Clarke escaped unhurt. All are under arrest.

WIND ON A TEAR.

Much Damage Caused Among the Oil Derricks.

Cygnet, O., Feb. 8.—A cyclone passed just south of this town about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon and did a great deal of damage to the property of the Buckeye pipe line and other oil companies.

The cyclone came from the southwest and went northeast. It swept everything in its path, tearing huge trees up by the roots.

Many derricks were blown down, and stairways of the tanks on the tank farm were carried away. The loss will reach $7,000.

MACKENZIE MEMORIAL.

London, Feb. 8.—Memorial services in honor of the late Dr. Morell Mackenzie were held here to-day. Many well-known actors were among the large congregation present at the services, some of whom were Henry Irving, J. L. Toole and Miss Fortescue. A splendid wreath was exposed in the church to which was attached a mourning card bearing the inscription "From Her Majesty Empress Frederick."

MADE A RICH HAUL.

A Russian Treasury Vault Robbed.

Nearly Half a Million Dollars Stolen From the Coffers of the Czar.

Denver, Col., Feb. 8.—The Russian government has officially notified Chief of Police Farley, through its consular agent at San Francisco, that one of its treasury vaults in Siberia has been despoiled by robbers.

Gold rubles to the amount of $396,000 have been taken, and his imperial majesty the czar requests that the chief arrest the robbers if they happen to arrive in Denver.

The robbery was committed December 1, the perpetrators making tracks at once across Siberia and the agents of the Russian police are of opinion that some one of the Chinese seaports is the point where they will take ship for America.

MAUMEE MENTION.

Notes of Interest From An Up-River Town.

Maumee, Feb. 8.—(Special)—Miss Gertie Gunn, of Toledo, spent Sunday in this city, the guest of her cousin, Miss Grace Wilcox.

Saturday afternoon the young Misses of this city held a carpet-rag bee at the Hotel Schiely for the benefit of Toledo Day Nursery. Mrs. Bolles, of Toledo, was manager of the affair. Twenty-five pounds of carpet rags were made and contributed to the nursery. Mrs. Schiely served a lunch to her young guests.

C. W. Boyd has recovered from a severe illness.

Dr. Kline, assisted by Dr. Bowers, of Perrysburg, will amputate the arm of John Wagner to-day.

Messrs. Nelson Harvey and Miner Hubbell have removed to Air Line Junction.

Frank Pulel is having great sport shooting muskrats with a Marlin repeating rifle. Frank is a center shot.

The ice in the river has moved down stream without doing us harm.

Mrs. W. L. Binkley and children spent Sunday in Toledo, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Watkins.

Capt. G. W. Cain is on the sick list.

Mr. J. K. Frederick has recovered from a severe sickness and is again on our streets.

J. A. Church is in Toledo to-day on business.

March 1 next Mr. J. H. Wyman will move his family to Chicago.

A lodge of Knights of Pythias is soon to be organized in this city. Mr. G. B. Shugar has the work of organizing in charge.

SPURGEON'S REMAINS.

The Funeral Will Take Place on Thursday,

Great Crowds Greet the Arrival of the Body in London—A Public Ceremony.

London, Feb. 8.—The remains of the late Rev. Charles Spurgeon arrived in London at 9 o'clock this morning.

The relatives of the deceased were on hand to receive the body and a large crowd of people had also assembled.

A plain hearse conveyed the body to the tabernacle, followed by about a dozen mourning carriages.

There was such an immense crowd around the tabernacle that it was found necessary to take the body to the adjacent park, where the people filed before the coffin and a number of clergymen delivered extemporaneous addresses.

There was no organized ceremony, however. The body was then placed in the tabernacle where it will remain until Thursday, when the funeral will take place.

BIG BLAZE IN FINDLAY.

Two Business Blocks Destroyed by Fire.

Damage to the Amount of Six Thousand Dollars—Several Narrow Escapes.

Findlay Feb. 8.—(Special)—This morning at half past two o'clock two frame buildings occupied as saloons and residences, on East Sandusky street, near the T., C. & C. depot, were burned to the ground with all their contents.

One belonged to L. D. Howes and the other to Mr. Durbin.

Several persons in the buildings narrowly escaped with their lives.

Mrs. Duck, an invalid, was carried out in her husband's arms.

The loss is about $6,000, nearly covered by insurance. The flames started from an overheated stove in Durbin's kitchen.

FALSE CRY OF FIRE.

London, Feb. 8.—A panic was caused on Saturday night by an alarm of fire in the Blackburn theatre. There was a mad rush for the doors in which furniture was smashed and clothes torn.

The alarm was a false one and the stage manager kept the performance going as if nothing had happened. The people were soon recalled to their senses, and the majority of the audience resumed their seats.

SOME SPICY CURRENT TOPICS

Of Local and Neighborhood Interest.

Notes and Comments on Incidents Occurring Daily—Prepared for Readers Who are Hustled for Time.

COUNCIL JOINT SESSION.

The council will hold a joint session this evening and once again wrestle with the appointment of Reynold Voit as gas trustee. A constable is also to be appointed to fill a vacancy.

ROOMS FOR CIRCUIT JUDGES.

A petition has been circulated among the local attorneys requesting the county commissioners to lease rooms in the Walbridge office building as a permanent circuit court room.

REAL ESTATE SALE.

This afternoon Mr. George Van Evera disposed of lot 99, with a house, in Kensington to Mr. Frank G. Benedict, the consideration being $4,750. Other sales are on the string, and the season promises to be lively.

DIVORCE CASE SFILED.

The following divorce cases were filed in common pleas court to-day:

Ida M. Fay against Thomas Fay.

Margaretta Schlicht against Henry Schlicht.

Emma Dwight against Charles Dwight.

TOLEDO MAENNERCHOR.

A musical entertainment will be given at the Turnhalle, on St. Clair street, Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Toledo Maennerchor. It will be a complimentary entertainment and the friends and families of the society have been invited.

FATHER KOLASINSKI'S CASE.

The case in police court against Father Kolasinski was this morning continued until Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when a hearing will be held. Much interest is taken in the case and a large number of Father Kolasinski's parishioners were in court this morning.

THE OHIO YACHT CLUB.

Secretary J. E. Gunckel, of the Ohio Yacht club, has issued notice of the regular monthly meeting of the club, Friday evening, February 12. But this is not all. The notice itself is quite novel, representing two yachts passing, with yachtsmen in the rigging saluting each other. Suspended between the yachts is the printed notice.

FOUND IN A STORE.

Last night Officer McCarthy found a small boy named Harry Davis in Darling's confectionery store and as it was after the store had been closed he arrested the youngster. This morning it was discovered that some gentlemen had found the store open late at night and requested the boy to stay there until the proprietor came. The boy was released this morning.

PAID FOR HIS BLACK EYES.

William C. Conlisk and Charles Fox were arraigned in police court this morning for a disturbance which occurred at a dance in lower town Friday night. The testimony showed that Fox had first attacked Conlisk and struck at him after which the latter struck back and gave Fox two beautiful black eyes.

Conlisk was discharged and Fox was fined $10 and costs.

SUIT FOR $20,000.

In common pleas court to-day Herman Buchele sued Briggs & Leibius to recover $20,000 for personal injury. The plaintiff in his petition says that on November 14, 1891, he was driving on Western avenue, and alleges that Briggs & Leibius' delivery wagon collided with his buggy, threw him out in front of a Consolidated street car, which ran over his left arm, injuring that member to such an extent that amputation was necessary.

THE C. K. OF O.

The central branch of the Catholic Knights of Ohio held a meeting last night at Friendship hall, Mr. P. J. Mettler, presiding. Several matters of interest to the organization were disposed of. Messrs. Kraus, Mettler, Gaban, Gorman and Lawless were selected to meet the Y. M. C. B. A. to-morrow night, to endeavor to enlist the aid of the society in pushing the new society. Another meeting of St. Leo branch will be held next Friday night, when it is expected permanent organization will be effected.

LECTURE ON IRELAND.

Grace church parish, on Stickney avenue, has been giving a course of entertainments, consisting of lectures, etc., to awaken interest and bring together the membership in closer form preparatory to entering upon the work of erecting the new church building. To-morrow evening the fourth in the course will be given, which will be a lecture on Ireland, by Rev. Ephraim Watt, rector of St. Mark's church. Mr. Watts is a native of Ireland, and is consequently in a position to handle his subject intelligently. An invitation is extended to the public, no admission being charged.

DESERTED BY HUSBANDS.

Humane Agent France is investigating the case of a young colored woman who claims that her husband, F. E. Brown, has deserted her. They have only been married a month, yet she is about to become a mother and her husband refuses to have anything to do with her, notwithstanding the fact that he is the cause of her trouble.

Infirmary Director Baumbach is in Wood county to-day for the purpose of taking care of a woman named Heckman, who with her six children have been deserted by the husband and father.

REST DAY LEAGUE.

The Rest Day League met this morning at the First Congregational church. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. J. A. P. McGaw, followed by the reading of the minutes, relating to business transacted by the executive committee. A. K. Wylie was appointed to assist the secretary in finding the state law in regard to Sunday observance. It was also agreed that the president ask the pastors at their next meeting to bring the matter of Sunday closing before their respective congregations and ask for membership to the Rest Day League. Adjournment was then taken until next Monday morning at 11:30 o'clock.

THE FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

The regular monthly meeting of the fire commissioners was held Saturday afternoon at headquarters. Chief Wall reported 22 fires for January. The usual monthly bills were approved, and some repairs ordered.

At the close of the commissioners' session, directors were chosen for the firemen's pension fund, Messrs. C. F. Wall, Peter McDonough and Peter Simonds being selected. Commissioner Eversman was elected president and Chief Wall secretary. Mrs. Mary Tyrill's death was reported. The fund has bonds aggregating $12,127.50, and $1,291.40 in cash. Nine pensioners are on the list, the amount paid last month being $237.

FUN IN STORE.

To-morrow evening an entertainment will be given at the Washington Street Congregational church, which will afford great amusement. While a fine program has been prepared, interest will center in the spelling contest, over which Rev. Dr. McGaw will be master, and the leaders Mrs. Julia Noble and Mr. Thomas Biddle, the English language to furnish the scope. Preceding the contest the following order will be observed:

Invocation, Rev. O. D. Fisher; music, The Orphean Club; duet, Misses Ogden and Demuth; violin solo, May Barden Colburn; recitation, Miss Amelia Zoerb; solo, Miss Mayme Ogden; music, The Orphean Club; recitation, Miss Genevieve Carpenter; piano solo, Mrs. Kate Wood.

THE BUILDERS' EXCHANGE.

The committee appointed at last Tuesday's meeting of those interested in the Builders' Exchange met Saturday night at Bacon & Huber's office. Mr. A. Bentley acted as chairman, and Mr. Ed J. Weiss as secretary. A code of rules and by-laws was agreed upon, to be submitted to-morrow night. Mr. Huber was thanked for the use of his rooms and for the necessaries to smoke while in session. The committee is composed of the following gentlemen: A. Bentley, carpentery; William J. Spear, brickwork; Michael Henohan, rubble stone; John McCaffrey, plastering; John Romeis, painting; Albert Neukom, cut stone; M. Donovan, iron work; E. HE IS KNOWN IN TOLEDO.

The salesmen and women of Cincinnati have a very strong assembly in the Knights of Labor. They issue a beautiful monthly magazine called "The Salesmen," and have recently opened up a club room for the benefit of members and invited guests. The presiding genius is Hugh Cavanaugh, general worthy foreman of the Knights of Labor, whose visits to Toledo have made him many friends who can heartily indorse this compliment, paid him in a recent issue of "The Salesman:"

As toastmaster and presiding officer there are few even in the best clubs of the country that are more efficient than Hugh Cavanaugh. It is not enough to be a stern parliamentarian in presiding over assembly meetings, club room "ladies' nights," club openings and the like, but wit and humor, and happy sayings to keep up the mirth of the occasion, is most important. Mr. Cavanaugh possesses this to a very marked extent, and his rulings are always fair, and he possesses the happy faculty of never letting the interest drag. He is a ready speaker on all questions and possesses a wonderful fund of public interest and especially on the labor questions of the age. He is not only a good speaker, but a forcible writer, and his pen has been called into play many times for the daily press of this and other cities.

LIBEL LAW IN LONDON.

Editor Perryman Sentenced in Court To-Day.

Blackmailers Get No Mercy From the Bench in England—A Righteous Decision.

London, Feb. 8.—W. Perryman, proprietor of the Financial Observer and Mining Herald, was to-day sentenced for the libel of which he was convicted last week. Perryman had, in his paper, accused Messrs. Bonnard, Deakin and Pulbrook with bribing the Financial News, a rival paper, to support dishonest schemes and with obtaining £58,000 as "promotion plunder" in connection with schemes for the purchase of breweries at Baltimore and elsewhere, and other large industries in the United States.

Justice North sentenced Perryman to two months' imprisonment as a first class of misdemeanor, and added that he understood that the jury intended by the verdict they gave in the case of January 21, to convey that the Financial Observer was a low, scurrilous, blackmailing sheet. The defendant, he said, had spent the time since in publishing libels on the jury which convicted him. In doing this he was guilty of a distinct contempt of court of which he must purge himself or suffer the consequences.

DOING THE BEST THEY CAN.

New Cars Will Soon be Here for the Robisons.

Mr. Robison said to a Bee this morning: "We expect to have most of our new cars here about the 21st. Fourteen are ordered for the 10th. All the material for the double tracking on Bartlett street, Lawrence avenue and Twenty-second street has been ordered and will be delivered as soon as the mud dries up sufficiently. We are giving the best service we can with what cars we have. The Huron street cars go as far as the Union depot, and we keep the cars on the "Belt" going one way. We keep more cars on the Belt than on the other lines because it accommodates a larger number of people, taking them near Indiana avenue at one point and at Franklin avenue at another point; so you see we are doing our best."

BALFOUR HARD TO DOWN.

London, Feb. 8.—Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour, the new leader of the house of commons, comes up smiling after the defeat of his party at Rossendale.

In a letter to his constituents he takes a cheerful view of the situation and says he has reason to hope that good progress will be made in the coming session with the conservative measures of remedial legislation for Ireland.

RECEIVER APPOINTED.

Nyack, N. Y., Feb. 8.—Abram Demarest, a district attorney of Rockland county, was this morning appointed receiver of the real estate and insurance business of Gen. J. H. Blauvell & Co. This is the firm whose cashier, Cole, mysteriously disappeared some time ago. Cole returned in a demented condition. His books were said to be in bad shape.

DASHED TO DEATH.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 8.—Catcher Michael Logan, of the Scranton base ball club, made a misstep in chasing some roughs who had stoned him and two companions at 10 o'clock last night, and tumbled 100 feet from the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad bridge into the gully beneath, being dashed to instant death.

OVERMAN'S TRIAL.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 8.—This forenoon's session of the Overman court martial was devoted to the argument of unimportant technicalities, which did not tend in any way to develop the case.

MINES REOPENING.

Bilbao, Feb. 8.—The riotous demonstrations of the miners are over except in the Arboledo district. Elsewhere the mines will reopen to-day for work.

SNOW IN SWITZERLAND.

Berne, Feb. 8.—Snow has been falling four days in Switzerland, blocking the railways in all directions.

Taken to the Chicago Bench Show.

John Poag, of this city, left for Chicago this afternoon, taking with him two famous dogs, Rex, of the same breed as Watch who died recently, and Beau Lire another handsome animal, where they will be entered at the coming bench show in that city.

COUNTER CHARGES.

The Overman Case Takes a Sensational Turn.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 8.—In the Overman court martial trial this afternoon it was developed that Rossiter, ex-chief clerk to Major Overman, and who is now appearing as the principal witness against the accused officer, was five years ago convicted of embezzling $5,000 from the Domestic Sewing Machine company.

Overman's counsel declare this will tend to weaken the case against their client.

AGAINST FREE COINAGE.

Important Decision By An Eastern Court.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The supreme court of the district of Columbia has denied the writ of mandamus in the celebrated silver brick case to compel the secretary of the treasury to coin into silver dollars, all silver bullion presented at United States mints.

The decision is construed by those interested to be a blow against the free coinage of silver.

FOLLOWING THE GRIP.

Vienna, Feb. 8.—The grip has left behind it a new form of disease, consisting of fever with sharp colic and ejections of blood. It is partially attributable to bad water used in this city, but particularly fastens on patients whose systems have been weakened by the grip.

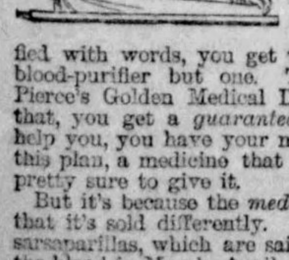
408---SUMMIT ST.---410



There's a wide difference between the help that's talked of and the help that's guaranteed.

Which do you want, when you are buying medicine?

If you're satisfied with words, you get them with every blood-purifier but one. That one is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. With that, you get a guarantee. If it doesn't help you, you have your money back. On this plan, a medicine that promises help is pretty sure to give it.

But it's because the medicine is different, that it's sold differently. It's not like the sarsaparillas, which are said to be good for the blood in March, April, and May. At all seasons and in all cases, it cures permanently, as nothing else can, all the diseases arising from a torpid liver or from impure blood.

It's the best blood-purifier, and it's the cheapest, no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar.

With this, you pay only for the good you get. Can you ask more?

Also, for constructing a cylindrical brick sewer two feet inside diameter and four-inch shell, along the center line of Sixth street from the center of Nevada street to Starr avenue.

Said work to be paid for in an assessment upon the lots and lands benefited thereby in proportion to the benefits, payable to the contractor or assigns, one-half in 10 days after the confirmation of the assessment and the remainder in one year thereafter, except the cost of that part of the work in street intersections, which will be paid in cash within 90 days after the acceptance of the work.

All bids must be written with ink and the price of each item shall be written out in full as well as in figures. Each bid must contain the full name of every person interested in the same. All parties filing bids for the matters specified in this notice, must deposit with the city clerk on each bid the sum of one hundred dollars. All deposits to be in cash or certified check on a bank doing a regular banking business in the city of Toledo, and accompanied by an agreement signed by the bidder and two disinterested persons, guaranteeing that, if the bid is accepted, a contract will be entered into—otherwise the amount deposited to be forfeited to the city; and in case a contract is entered into, said deposit to remain until the first estimate of work done, (or double the amount of deposit,) is reported to the common council.

Bidders will be required to indorse their names on the outside of the envelope containing their proposal, and what the bid is for, the same to be filed with the city clerk. Bids not filed in accordance with the above requirements will be rejected.

Blank bids and envelopes can be obtained of the undersigned or of the city civil engineer.

Bidders must specify the time within which they will commence and complete the work after the acceptance of their bid.

Plans and specifications can be seen at the office of the city civil engineer.

The council reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

By order of the Council.

A COLUMN OF SMILES

A Deduction.

A little girl 3 years old has a way of deduction which is quite unique. Going into the kitchen, she was surprised to see the lid of the teakettle lift itself up and down. The cook told her that it was steam, and she seemed satisfied. Several weeks after she was traveling by train, and seeing a locomotive in the depot, asked her mother what it was.

When told it was to draw the train, she wanted to know how, and the force of steam in the teakettle was recalled to her. The next day, while talking to gentleman, she suddenly remarked:

"Do you know horses isn't pulling this train?"

"No," he said. "What is?"

"A dreat bid teatittle."—Harper's Bazor.

Not Much of a Talker.

"Well, Tommy," said the visitor, "how do you like your baby brother?"

"Oh, lots and lots—only I don't think he's very bright."

"Why not?"

"We've had him 'most two weeks now, and he hasn't said a word to anybody.—Ohama World.

A Great Inducement For Her.

"Look here, George, I am positively tired of your talking love to me this way every time you call."

"Marry me, then, and I'll never speak another word of love to you as long as I live."—New York Press.

His Curiosity Was Satisfied.

In an elevated railway train last week sat a tired-looking workman, and with him was an active boy of about 10 years. They were going uptown. At Chambers street a young man with a big basket got into the car and sat down opposite the pair. He put the basket on the seat beside him, and pulling a newspaper from his pocket, held it up before his face and was soon oblivious to his surroundings.

The boy was restless. He was constantly fidgeting. The man had restrained him several times, but chains and a gag would hardly have kept him perfectly quiet. His eye was instantly fixed upon the basket. He made up his mind that there was something good inside it.

"Papa, papa!" he demanded.

"Hush, boy!" said the tired man, as he leaned his head against the window, closed his eyes and tried to sleep.

"Can't I look into it, papa?"

"Don't bother me, I say."

Silence followed for a little time and then:

"Say, papa, I only want to look. Can't I?"

"Look at anything you like, but don't wake me again or I'll cuff you."

The boy slipped from his seat cautiously. He kept an eye on the owner of the basket, but the newspaper still held him and the coast was clear. The basket had a strong wicker cover, which was fastened firmly with a string. He tried to untie the string for sometime, but failing in this, he took a jack-knife out of his pocket and stealthily cut the knot. Taking another careful look at the owner of the basket, the mischievous lad lifted the lid slowly and, putting his eye to the opening, peered in.

Then, quick as a flash, the cover was knocked up out of his hand, and a brown streak shot from inside it to the top of the boy's head. The lad's first cry of surprise was followed immediately by shrieks of pain and terror. Something live was perched on the boy's head, tearing his hair out in wisps and scratching his face and ears till the blood ran.

The father grabbed his precious boy just as the owner of the animal grabbed the monkey from the boy's head and restored it to the basket.

The lad had not had much of a look at the monkey, but his curiosity seemed to be fully satisfied.—New York Tribune.

"MRS. PRESIDENT R."

How Pride in All Its Plumes Had a Hard Fall.

The following story is told of two young girls who were recently traveling on a train in this state. As the train stopped at a station, two ladies entered and took seats in front of them; then a stout lady came forward and greeted them and kept up a lively conversation until the train started. Then one of the two said: "Sit down here near us, and tell those girls to sit somewhere else." So the stout lady turned and said, in freezing tones: "I wish to converse with my friends, and would like that seat. I am Mrs. President R., of this road." The girls stared at her an instant, and then one of them drawled, "Pleased to meet you, I'm sure. I suppose you know I am Mrs. President Harrison, of Wasington." The other girl, settling herself comfortably in her seat, said, "And I am Mrs. Queen Victoria." Neither of them moved, and Mrs. President R. had to go back to her own seat.

THE TURTLE BANQUET

Has Not Yet Been Paid for by the League,

And Judge Pike Succeeds in Getting a Day for the Trial of the Suit Filed Nearly a Year Ago.

The banqueters who gathered around the groaning tables spread by L. H. Meinert for use of the Republican league a year ago in Toledo, at this distant day frequently get a whiff of the aroma of green turtle soup that makes them regret the last meal they ate.

A notable gathering, that. All the big bugs and nabobs of the Ohio republican circle were there. Men of wealth and distinction partook and made merry over viands that were not and are still not paid for.

The Republican league assumed the dignity of a king in calling its friends to this festal board, and to-day they are dodging the collector with a bill for the same.

Last November the club offered to settle with Mr. Meinert, for $1,050. Realizing that a half loaf was better than no loaf at all, Mr. Meinert accepted the proposition. And so it was given out, with much pomp and dignity, that the bills had been paid, and the Republican league was under obligation to no one.

So far so good, but be it remembered, that from November to the next annual meeting of the league was not far in the future. The green turtle soup banquet was managed by Toledo members, turtle and all. The spread was not paid for. W. I. Squire was elected president of the league on this memorable date. Who would be interested in having the green turtle soup affair and the suit in court smothered over, along about this stage of the game?

Judge Pike has the case in charge for Mr. Meinert, and ever since the day on which the affair was settled (?) he has been endeavoring from day to day, week to week, and month to month to induce the Toledo managers to live up to their contract and pay Mr. Meinert the $1,050 they gave their pledge to do, but not one cent has he ever been able to collect from that day to this.

In default of this pledge Judge Pike this morning caused the case to be assigned in common pleas court, and it was set down for hearing one week from tomorrow.

A TOLEDO MAN

Originates a Scheme to Utilize Niagara's Power.

W. S. Sheridan Was a Successful Competitor for $100,000 That He Probably Won't Get—Another Invention.

W. S. Sheridan, an old Toledo man, all round inventor and general genius, now of Perrysburg, where he conducts the Sheridan Wheel works, is in town to-day smiling at acquaintances. Mr. Sheridan is as full of curious inventions as an egg is of meat. Just now he is busy with an engine that will run from New York to San Francisco with a ton of coal and a barrel of water, or something about as seemingly impossible. Anyway the thing is patented and will soon be given a trial. Among other things this contrivance consumes the smoke, cinders and steam over again and twists the whole science of combustion as now understood all out of shape.

Some time ago when the citizens of Buffalo and Erie county offered a prize of $100,000 to the person who would produce the most feasable plan for utilizing the power of Niagara Falls, "harnessing the cataract," Mr. Sheridan calls it. Well there were of course hundreds of inventive minds turned loose on the project, many of them cranks, and of course a good many sound thinkers also. Mr. Sheridan was one of the latter and finally out of the entire batch he was declared one of the ten men whose plans appeared feasible. At last the sifting process was continued and Mr. Sheridan and two others were the only ones who remained in the contest.

Then whoever was at the head of the scheme got tired of holding the $100,000, and the matter, somehow or other, fell flat, as many previous attempts to chain the falls had before, and Mr. Sheridan lost the fortune that was almost within his grasp.

Just at present the scheme has been revived, or at least a new scheme is on foot that promises to go through as work is progressing. In this great engineering venture many of Mr. Sheridan's suggestions are being adopted as well as the best point of the other late contestants. Mr. Sheridan has put in a claim, and there the matter rests. Perhaps he'll get something, perhaps not. At any rate, he don't care much and keeps on hustling.

THE C. K. OF A.

Grand Banquet in Toledo Next Week.

The Supreme Officers Will be Present—Arrangements for a Reception and Mass Meeting.

Next Monday and Tuesday will be gala days in the history of the Toledo branches of the Catholic Knights of America. The chief officers of the organization will be in attendance. The object of the meeting is to have a reunion, and also to hold the customary semi-annual examination of the books of the supreme treasurer, Chas. J. Kirschner, of this city.

The officers who will attend will be Supreme Secretary John Barr, of Lebanon, Ky.; Senior Supreme Trustees I. J. Duffy, Memphis; A. D. McGinnis, Providence, R. I., and Richard Walsh, St. Louis, and probably Supreme President Coleman, of New Orleans.

It is the purpose of the local branches to give the officers a grand reception and also to hold a mass meeting at which addresses will be delivered by the visitors.

A WIDEAWAKE SOCIETY,

With Increasing Membership, Is the Political Equality Club.

The Political Equality club held its meeting With Mrs. Edward Quigley, Tenth street, Saturday afternoon, President Murphy presided, and after reading a chapter from Fiske's Civil Governments, gave a brief resume of the work done by the president and cabinet, and of legislative and foreign affairs, the committees appointed to make these reports being absent. Mrs. Murphy also gave an interesting account of her visit to Columbus last week in the interest of school suffrage, to the effect that the chances are favorable for the passage of the bill which has already been introduced and will be acted upon as soon as the contested legislative cases are disposed of. The parliamentary drill on dependent motions was then conducted by Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Quigley, Mrs. Reinhart, Mrs. Dutton and Miss Calkins. There were a large number of strangers present, and several names were added to the membership roll. The club accepted an invitation to hold its next meeting with Mrs. Rosa L. Segur, and adjourned to meet at her residence, 916 Broadway, Saturday afternoon, February 20. The committee on president and cabinet, congress, foreign affairs and the state legislature were continued. Another drill on dependent motions will be had at the next meeting.

TOLEDO LUMBER RATES.

Improvements at the Clover Leaf Offices.

Railroad Earnings—Some Big Engines—Arrivals and Departures Locally.

Lumber rates from Toledo and other Lake Erie points to Wheeling and Pittsburg will be taken up at the Central Traffic association freight committee at Chicago to-morrow. It is probable, however, that no change in the present rates will be made, as some of the most important lines are opposed to so doing. The meeting will be largely attended as many important matters are to come up. Toledo lines will be represented by Frank Janes of the Pennsylvania; H. J. Booth, of the Wheeling & Lake Erie; C. T. Wight, of the B. & O.; Hudson Fitch, of the Ohio Central lines, and A. E. Billings of the Lake Shore. Mr. Booth, in view of his recent appointment as general passenger agent of the Wheeling, will wear boxing gloves and carry a box of cigars with which to receive the congratulations that will be showered upon hm.

The Clover Leaf Offices.

Many improvements are being made at the general offices of the Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City railroad in this city. The main hall is being extended through the center of the building so that all offices can be reached from it without going through from one to the other. Assistant Treasurer M. L. Crowell's office will be moved to the rear of the hall on the right, in what was formerly the drafting room. General Passenger Agent W. S. Weed will have a private office, and another office will be fitted up for his assistant, I. B. Davis. Auditor D. D. Davis has a new office in the rear of the building up-stairs. Other improvements are being made and the Clover Leaf will have a commodious, well-arraanged home.

C., H. V. & T. Earnings.

The earnings of the Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo railroad for the month of January show a good increase—nearly 23 per cent. The earnings were as follows:

January, 1892	$250,748
January, 1891	205,043
Increase	45,705

T., St. L. & K. C. Earnings.

Clover Leaf earnings are still on the increase, the earnings for the first week in February, 1892, being $40,238 as compared with $26,502 for the same week last year, showing an increase of $13,-756. This is a very good showing, as last year was a big one for the road.

Some Whoppers.

Pennsylvania officials are preparing designs for extra heavy passenger engines. They will have 10 wheels, with 19x24 inch cylinders, boilers 62 inches in diameter and 68-inch high drivers. They will weigh 120,000 pounds and will be known as class X. The firebox at the front end will be deepened and the number and diameter of the tubes will be increased.

A Few Little Liners.

General Manager A. G. Blair, of the W. & L. E., is in Cleveland to-day.

Traveling Passenger Agent A. G. Sherman, of the Union Pacific, is in the city to-day.

E. N. Kendall, traveling freight agent of the B. & O., went up in Michigan this afternoon.

The Detroit and Toledo Superintendent's association meets at the Boody house Wednesday afternoon.

W. H. Bennett and H. W. Ashley, of the T., A. A. & N. M., returned this morning from Milwaukee.

S. F. Boyd, of Chicago, assistant general passenger agent of the Rock Island, is calling on local passenger men.

The sale of the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw railroad will be confirmed Thursday at Cleveland by Judge Ricks.

General Passenger Agent C. C. Jenkins, of the Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City railroad, went down the line this morning.

General Passenger Agent J. M. Hall, of the Wheeling & Lake Erie, is in Chicago to-day attending the funeral of his sister.

Work will be commenced on the branches of the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan railroad as soon as spring opens.

Chief Engineer A. L. Mills, of the Clover Leaf, speaking to a Bee this morning, said that improvements would be pushed on the road this year more vigorously that last. They would include ballasting, tracks, yards and buildings.

Wheat Quotations for the Day—Price Current for Produce and Other Articles

London wheat market quiet and turn dearer. Corn firmer. Liverpool wheat firm but dull, and 1-2 pence lower. Corn 3-4d lower.

The receipts of wheat at seven principal western points to-day are 568,273 bu., compared with 351,440 bu. on the same day last year.

Bradstreets says: Our regular monthly London cable dispatch from Mr. J. E. Beerbohm gives the total of wheat stock on February 1 at Odessa, at French ports, Paris, Berlin, Danzig and Stettin, in first hands in the U. K. and afloat from all sources for the U. K. and the continent. This, with Bradstreets' totals of wheat available east and west of the Rocky mountains, in the United States and Canada, in comparison with like aggregates in preceding dates, is as follows:

Seed Market.

The receipts of this commodity at Toledo last week were 1,520 bags, shipments 4,512 bags. In the corresponding week in 1891 the receipts were 2,067 bags, shipments 4,398 bags. Since September 1 to February 6, receipts have been 56,548 bags, and the shipments 44,765 bags, compared with receipts 62,769 bags and shipments 54,371 bags in the corresponding period in 1890-91.

The exports from New York for the week ending January 30, were 4,335 bags, and since September 1 to same date 55,-825 bags, compared with 46,695 bags in the corresponding period in 1890-91.

Baltimore—There is a fair local inquiry and prices rule steadily and firm for clover, but there is little doing in it for export and these dealers are about idle. Prices are unchanged. Receipts to-day 1,200 bu clover. Exports for the week ending February 5, clover 3,175 bu; timothy 1,132 bu.

The receipts of wheat at Minneapolis and Duluth are large for the season, say 414,426 bus. At five other western points the receipts are light, say 153,847 bus.

The export clearances Saturday were light, wheat 121,618 bus and flour to an aggregate of 400,000 bus. Exports of corn 302,395 bus and of oats 260,046 bus.

English markets as reported herein, open dull and lower for wheat and corn. The visible supply of wheat increased in the 38,428 bus. Corn 1,147,291 bus. Oats 149,786 bups.

The Markets To-Day.

St. Louis states the arrival of ten barges to load wheat sold for export.

Cable advices on Friday give unfavorable accounts of the French and Russian wheat crops.

The rate of lake freight and storage in vessels until opening of navigation has declined at Chicago 3-4c bus.

During the past week large sales of wheat at western points have been reported for export.

Stock of No. 2 Wheat.

Of No. 2 winter wheat there is in store at Toledo, New York, St. Louis, Chicago and Detroit, 5,700,000 bus. It is not the time of year to expect much additions to these stocks. It is reasonable to expect depletion, and a good deal of it, for export. Will the friends of wheat please make a note of it. On the western Exchanges a great deal of this wheat is held for May delivery sales against it, and it cannot be bought in any quantity at less than the May price.

The break in Chicago market Saturday last, is responded to by Liverpool to-day with dull market, and a little more than the Chicago decline. The Liverpool quotation for seaboard No. 2 winter wheat equals $1 12 bus., and our prices are now a little too high for our No. 2 soft, which is 2c to 3c in value above the seaboard grade.

The wheat markets on this side opened lower, with some little upward fluctuation in the first half hour, but the gain soon lost and was succeeded by a slowly declining market. An increase in the visible supply, against an expected decrease, had a weakening effect. The market at Chicago at one time was 1 1-8c lower, but near the close became firmer east and west. On reported Russian importations of wheat from Germany and which were said to be confirmed by cable to Chicago, Chicago market closed higher, and New York lower.

In New York.—February wheat closed 1c and May 1 1-8c lower. February corn 1 1-8c and May 3-8c lower. February oats 1-8c lower.

In Chicago.—May wheat closed 1-4c higher. February corn 3-4c and May 1-2c higher.

In Toledo—A moderately active wheat market is reported, both for cash and May delivery. For the latter on the call there were sales at 95 7-8c. After the call there was some fluctuation, opening at 95 7-8@96c, selling down to 95 1-8c, and closing at 96c, a loss of 1-2c. After change there were sales at 96 1-2c. July sold on the call at 91 1-8c.

Cash February wheat was in good demand. No. 2 soft sold at 93c to 92 1-2c and was about 1-2c higher to buy after 'Change. No. 3 soft sold at 90 1-2c.

Corn was dearer. No. 2 at 41 1-2c; No. 3 at 40c; No. 2 white at 43 to 42 1-2c; No. 2 yellow at 41 1-2c; No. 3 yellow, 41c. No. 2 for May at 43 1-4c.

Oats on the call, May sold at 32 1-4c. Clover Seed was very quiet. No sales of prime for cash. February sold at $5 65. No. 2 at $5 30.

The trading in stocks this morning was very active with the principal dealings, as on Saturday, in the coal shares. Reading was the feature and in the first half hour the trading in it was enormous, 110,-000 shares changing hands. Its price climbed rapidly and advanced on almost every transaction. Although the activity in the other coal shares were not so marked as in Reading the advance in them was more pronounced. Reading rose from 46 to 48 1-2, Lackawanna from 152 1-2 to 157, Jersey Central from 125 1-2 to 128 1-4, and D. & H. from 129 1-8 to 130 1-4. The next most active stock after Reading was Erie, 30,-000 shares of it having been sold in the first half hour. Its price advanced from 30 5-8 to 32 1-8. The railroad stocks and the trusts were generally neglected during this large movement in the coalers, but after the first call they became more prominent, the buying of the coal stock having almost ceased. Atchison, Ont. & Western and Whisky trust became prominent in the dealings. The last-named fell off from 49 1-2 to 47 3-4. The general market was weak and declined a fraction by 11 o'clock. In the hour to noon Reading again developed marked activity, and, followed by the other coal stocks, made a still further advance. The general market, too, was firmer, and St. Paul, Louis. & Nash., Erie, C. C. C. & St. L. and Nor. Pac. pfd. recorded material advances. At this writing the market is dull and somewhat easier. The sales amounted to 421,600 shares, being the largest morning's trading in months.

FISH, ICE AND HAMS,

With a Full Supply of Fishermen's Twine,

Destroyed by Fire at Manhattan—Brown, Kelting and Dewey Are the Victims.

Fire broke out about 10:30 Saturday night in the slaughter house of Walter Brown & Co., situated along the river below Kelsey & Freeman's lumber yard. Two alarms were turned in and the department was on hand as soon as possible, the run for the apparatus being a long one. Much difficulty was experienced in getting water to the flames, as there are no hydrants to be used in that neighborhood, and it is difficult to get to the river. Three streams were all that could be played on the fire.

In consequence the slaughter house was destroyed, as well as a large ice house belonging to the same firm and an ice house and fish packing house owned by John Kelting. Both ice houses were filled and considerable fish were stored in the house owned by Kelting.

It is not known how the blaze started, as there had been no fire in the slaughter house for several days.

Mr. Walter Brown states that his loss will be about $12,000, with an insurance of $6,000. He had in his three frame ice houses about 3,500 tons of splendid ice, which is nearly all lost.

A fortunate shift of wind took the flames away from his packing and cold storage house just at the moment when it seemed as though they must be lost.

Mr. Kelting's loss is estimated as follows: On brick ice house, $2,000, with $800 insurance in the Sun Fire Insurance company of New York; on frame store house and cooler, loss $1,000, insurance $500 in the Citizens of Pittsburg; loss on stock such as nets, tools, wagons, hay, corn and ice, $1,800, with no insurance.

This makes the total estimated loss by the fire about $16,000.

"MOTHER IS DEAD."

Tribute to the Memory of Mrs. Charlotte Crumbaugh, Who Died Yesterday.

"No other worship abides and endures,
Faithful, unselfish and patient like yours."

The little mother has gone, gone to that beautiful country from whence no traveler ever returns. No more will her low sweet voice be heard calling, calling her dear boy who has been her strength and her stay. A true knight, indeed. And the gentle footsteps gliding from window to window, watching and waiting for his home coming—there was music in his footfall. But as years sped by sorrow and physical suffering left their marks, she clung more closely to the son and daughter that were left. For the taking away of a husband in the spring time of their married life—and in the latter years the beautiful and loving daughter, Grace, who was not only so by name, but nature—was a grief which well nigh broke her heart.

But all is peace and happiness now, the dear Saviour has bidden her come, and "after years of sad quest," she has obeyed the summons.

"Vaguely the lost faces gleam to her;
Vaguely the vanished eyes beam to her;
Vaguely the far-away glories divine, from
Heaven's unclasping gates stream to her."

Mrs. Crumbaugh was a true Christian, a devoted mother, and a homemaker; three attributes in woman that kiss each other and make her almost divine.

O mother, mother that magical name that charms every grief and pain, how can we part from thee? comes from the great depths of the weary heart; how can we live without thee? But no response is heard from the lips that were once warm. No loving caress; neither whisperings of joy or sorrow come from that echoless shore, for none return and "All that breathe will share thy destiny." But she goes not alone, she rests her hand confidingly in the dear Saviour's and He leads her kindly to the other side, amidst the sound of sweet music, music she loved to hear so well, and which soothed her to sleep, when racked with pain and unrest. Sleep, gentle spirit, sleep.

THE WAY TO GO.

You have seen California frequently mentioned in newspapers and magazines. Perhaps a friend has been there and writes enthusiastic letters back home about the climate and the fruits. It makes you anxious to see the country for yourself.

The time to go is in the fall and winter. Then work here is least pressing and California climate is most pleasing. The way to go is via Santa Fe route, on one of that line's popular, personally-conducted parties, leaving Chicago every Saturday evening and leaving Kansas City every Sunday morning.

Special agents and porters in attendance. Pullman tourist sleepers are used, furnished with bedding, mattresses, toilet articles, etc. Second-class tickets honored. Write to Geo. E. Gilman, Michigan Passenger Agent Santa Fe route, for folder describing these excursions.

The place to find pleasant and agreeable offices, is in the Bee building. Every convenience known, rapid passenger elevator, steel ceilings, fire proof vaults, Smead system of heat and ventilation, and perfect light in every room.

Perhaps Blaine has a string to it.

It is not a question of gerrymander with the republican legislature, but how mean to do it.

The Foraker republicans will probably turn to Alger for a Moses, now that Blaine is out of the way.

Strange, isn't it? that with the wing of tariff protection over the laborer in this country all these many years, labor organizations have sprung up and multiplied continually for the sole purpose of defending labor! The farce of the thing is coming to be pretty well understood. Results show who gets the benefit of "protection."

Ex-Governor Thayer has undoubled his fists and smilingly invites Gov. Boyd to take the chair which he (Thayer) has been hanging to for months, knowing he had no right or title to it. He comes down when he is obliged to, and he deserves the Bee's prescription of boot leather just the same as a reminder to him and the conscienceless crowd he represents.

Another form of evasion of our immigrant laws is reported by the assistant secretary of the treasury to the state department. It has been discovered by him that the British war office pays the pensions allowed disabled soldiers in a lump, on condition they will emigrate. The pensioners take the money and come to the United States. Of course when the money is gone they become a public charge here. One more instance of the futility of our immigration laws.

A Columbus dispatch to a republican organ Saturday shows the fine spirit of harmony that prevails in republican party councils at the capital. The re-districting bill, otherwise the gerrymander, is watched for "Sherman" lines, and it is said the Foraker men could join with the democrats and defeat the measure if they detected the senatorial finger marks on the bill. What a feeling of rancor must remain, that the bare suggestion of union with the horrible democracy is put into words, as a means of revenge.

James G. Blaine again illustrates the fact that he is still the "boss" letter writer. He never fails to make himself interesting. The guesses that will follow his latest publication will take on every political hue. The most plausible, perhaps, is that the secretary knows his physical condition will not permit the attempt, and if Harrison should be re-elected he has promise of his present position and opportunity to finish the McKinley bill by reciprocity treatment. That would be greater glory than to be president a month or two and then die and give the vice the chair.

Governor Flower does not approve the policy of state aid to University Extension courses, but hastens to make it understood that he heartily approves the measure itself as a means of disseminating education. He believes whatever the state can afford to spend for educational work would better be applied to the perfecting of the common school system. Gov. Flower is right. Communities are able to manage the university courses for their own benefit. The appealing for state or national aid for every project, worthy though it may be, is becoming too prevalent a custom, and strikes at the root of our independence.

It is said, in a Detroit dispatch to the New York Mail and Express, that ex-President Cleveland's visit to Michigan is not simply to address the students of Ann Arbor University, on invitation, but to meet democratic leaders in conference to discuss nomination possibilities. Dickinson, Vilas, Lamont and ex-Gov. Campbell are mentioned as members of the conclave prospective. It is said that Mr. Cleveland will throw his strength, in case he deems it wise to decline, in favor of an outside man, and that man will be the ex-governor of Ohio. While the Ohio democracy would appreciate so fine a compliment, it does not believe this to be the political plane upon which Mr. Cleveland stands. When he himself decides he will not make the race, he will so inform the party.

MR. BLAINE DECLINES.

Mr. Blaine has published his long-promised letter of withdrawal from the candidacy of his party for president. It is a short manly letter, and though it has the appearance of having a string attachment, it will generally be understood as sincere. This leaves the field clear for the renomination of President Harrison.

Mr. Blaine occupies a singular place in his party. For twelve years he has been the foremost republican. As secretary of state under Garfield he was the power behind and on the throne, but his aggressiveness caused fatal factions in his party. As the Great Defeated after the election in 1884 he was clearly the one leader around whom his party rallied. He would have been the candidate in 1888, except for his persistent declination. He has been the prominent figure of the present administration, and could easily brush Harrison aside and take the nomination from the Minneapolis convention. He declines in advance, but still remains the leader of his party.

Very likely the precarious condition of Mr. Blaine's health compelled the step he has just taken. But whatever the motive it is a manly way to do. It is a good example to follow in all parties. From 1876 to 1880 the democrats conceded the renomination of Samuel J. Tilden. They thought of no other candidate. The delegates went to the Cincinnati convention fully determined to nominate him. At the last moment, when the convention was in session, he withdrew and the delegates were at sea for twenty-four hours, finally nominating Gen. Hancock. This reminder is suggested by the Blaine letter.

It is a matter of general newspaper discussion just now that Mr. Cleveland also contemplates a similar move, though there is no direct knowledge upon the subject either from him or his intimate friends. It is very certain that Grover Cleveland can have the nomination from his party, and it is more than probable that he will receive it unless he voluntarily withdraws. He is not only the foremost democrat in the land to-day, but by far he is the foremost American citizen to-day. His record as president is the best in a long line for fifty years. His courageous stand for tariff reform makes him the matchless leader of leaders. His position on the public land question, his grand exposition of the principle that "public office is a public trust," though a little offensive to rank partisans, is expression of the broad principle of good politics. So, while the democracy of the country largely gravitates toward Mr. Cleveland, it is no more than right for the leader to intimate through his lieutenants his personal desires. This is practical politics, and good politics. This is the year for democratic success. We must make no mistakes, and free, open and manly discussion should be indulged from now until the Chicago convention in June.

The Royal Labor Commission, in deference to popular demand, has appointed four women to collect evidence on the condition of English working women. This is as it should be. No one but a woman can make a thorough investigation into conditions surrounding women workers. In some of our eastern states this has been recognized by the appointment of women factory inspectors, a step which should be taken in Ohio.

The Washington Post notices that Ex-Czar Reed puts on "a seal-brown expression" every time he hears a reference to the nomination of a dark horse at the Minneapolis convention.

"Make child-stealing a more odious crime," says an exchange, reviewing the Ward Waterbury case. The demand might properly be revised "Make crime more odious."

The chief objection to naming one of the new warships Gloucester is it takes so many extra letters to spell "Glo'ster."

It Will Be Done.

New England sent a majority of her representatives to the Fifty-second congress with a specific injunction to abolish the oppressive features of the McKinley tariff law which have worked so much detriment to her industries. It is the duty of these representatives to insist that any tariff policy framed must contain the proposals needed to accomplish this purpose.—The Republic.

Thayer and the Stone Wall.

In his refusal to give up the governor's chair of Nebraska to its rightful possessor, Acting Gov. Thayer will have the sympathy of but very few men of either party. He is running his head against the stone wall of legal and political right and is sure to come out second best.—Boston Record.

No Higgling in This Congress.

There should be no higgling in a democratic congress over the bill to put wool on the free list, and to repeal the compensatory duties on woolens intended to give back to the manufacturer the duty paid on his raw material. Pass the bill! Let the other fellows do the higgling.—Philadelphia Record.

Oh, No! Or He Would Be Retained.

A man who is described as the most consummate liar in Washington has just been discharged from the treasury department. It is suspected that he has had a hand in making up the monthly debt statement.—St. Joseph News.

Take Care of the Harbors.

A lesson of our late experience with a war fever is that we need many more torpedo boats for port defenses. Uncle Sam has lots of harbors to take care of, and if they are safe so is the country.—New York Evening World.

THE OLD STORY.

The Dynamite Thawed and Caused Much Damage.

Philadelphia, Feb. 8.—By the careless handling of a stick of dynamite an explosion took place yesterday in a small frame shanty in Manyunk, resulting in the entire demolition of the building and the injury of six lads, one of whom, Charles Harris, has since died.

One of the boys had found a dynamite cartridge and some black powder which had been left by workmen in the reservoir.

The boys met at the shanty and one of them exhibited the dynamite and powder. They applied a match, when the explosion followed.

CARNEGIE IN THE PULPIT.

He Tells the People That It Is Proper That Some Should be Rich.

New York, Feb. 8.—Andrew Carnegie occupied the pulpit of the Unitarian Church of the Divine Paternity, Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street, last night by invitation of the pastor, Rev. C. H. Eaton, and delivered a sermon.

His theme was "The Gospel of Wealth," and he reiterated his well-known views on the advantages derived by society from the concentration of wealth in a few hands, provided the accumulations be rightly used, as trust funds for the good of the possessor's fellow men.

HELD UP THE STAGE.

A Lone Highwayman Doing a Big Business.

Mokulemne Hill, Cal., Feb. 8.—The stage to Valley Springs was stopped by a highwayman yesterday about four miles from this place at the same spot where a stage was robbed on January 7 last.

The robber was masked with a gunny sack. He was a man about five feet ten inches in height, dressed in dark clothing.

The driver was ordered to throw out the express box and he obeyed. The passengers were not molested.

The information was brought to town and officers Goodwin and some citizens started out. The box was found opened and empty.

COAL DEALERS COMBINE.

They Enter a Scheme to Contract the Markets.

Philadelphia, Feb. 8.—The Enquirer says the rise in coal stocks is due to the operations of a syndicate of bankers, headed by Drexel & Morgan, in harmonizing the interests of the great corporations now engaged in producing and handling coal. Each railroad company will secure control of the tonnage originating along its line, thus limiting the number of sellers to seven or eight.

PORTER RETURNS.

New York, Feb. 8.—Hon. Robert P. Porter, superintendent of the census, was a passenger on the steamship Yumuri which arrived this morning from Havana.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Spurgeon, like Grant, loved a good cigar, and he smoked almost as many of them as the general did.

Miss Rhoda Broughton's latest kindly fad is the "Home of Rest for Horses," and she is giving it a deal of attention.

Ethel Ingalls, the ex-senator's daughter, has a celebrated black cat about which she has just written a magazine story for children.

Few literary men have been blessed with more lovable wives than was the poet Paul H. Hayne, whose widow has just died in Augusta, Ga.

It was an odd coincidence that Cardinals Manning and Simeoni were elevated to their highest rank in the church the same day and died on the same day.

Siemens, the Berlin electrician, will spend $285,000 on the exhibit of his firm at the world's fair, and will occupy about 70,000 square feet of floor space.

The Westminster chapter supports the nomination of Mgr. Gilbert as archbishop in succession to the late Cardinal Manning, and his nomination will be forwarded to the vatican.

The parents of ex-Senator Ingalls are still living at Haverhill, Mass. The father, now over 80 years of age, was the inventor of several useful machines employed in manufacturing shoes.

Prince Victor Emanuel, heir to the Italian crown, is one of the handsomest and most accomplished men of his station in life. Although near 30 years of age, and widely traveled, he is yet unmarried.

Lady Harris, like her husband, Lord Harris governor of Bombay, is fond of cricket, and, for a woman, can bat and bowl with considerable skill. She recently captained the winning eleven in a ladies' match.

Queen Victoria's favorite retreat, it is said, is the private garden of Osborne Castle, on the Isle of Wight. She is less exposed there to the restraints of high place and the espionage of servants than in her other residences.

H. H. Bancroft, the historian of the Pacific coast, is spending the winter in Mexico with his family, being engaged meanwhile in writing, at the request of President Diaz, an account of the resources and development of the country, for publication in English and Spanish, in time for the world's fair.

James McCullough, the last surviving child of the late tragedian, John McCullough, died recently in Philadelphia. The only survivor of the actor now living is Letitia McCullough, daughter of James, who is about 18 years of age, and to whom the estate, valued at $60,000, descends by her grandmother's will.

MENTIONED ON THE STREETS.

That there is a lull at the opera house this week.

That the labor situation in Toledo is giving conservative people some anxiety.

That Mayor Emmick's gas investigating committee will visit the field this week.

That much depends on the joint session to-night for Mayor Emmick and Reynold Voit.

That the organization of the Builders' Exchange will be completed to-morrow night.

That all the promotions on the Wheeling & Lake Erie road have not yet been given to the public.

That Toledo's coal trade would be considerably larger if the city was not discriminated against.

That illuminating gas bills are materially decreasing, owing to the lengthened days and reduced price.

That Charley Griffin has informed intimate friends he will be a candidate for congress in the new district.

That there are fifteen candidates for the four justices offices, seeking preferment at the hands of the republicans.

That the ladies are meeting with fair success in disposing of tickets for the charity ball on Friday evening.

That work will begin on the Woolson's new plant as soon as the plans can be put in shape for the workmen.

That great sport is expected at to-morrow night's spelling contest at the Washington Street Congregational church.

That Charley Murphy's applicant for a wife has not yet put in an appearance, and the former is therefore 75 cents ahead.

That the friends of Joe Batch will again endeavor to secure his nomination for the council in the Fifth ward on the democratic ticket.

That ex-Senator Geyser will never visit the Toledo asylum as a trustee. The few nominations sent to the senate by Gov. Campbell are hung up.

That the Robisons are fixing up their open cars, and if present mild weather continues they can be used without serious objection until the new ones arrive.

That the asylum force gathered nearly a thousand tons of ice during the recent cold snap, which will supply a want that had to be dearly paid for the past year.

That the illuminating gas company did a neat thing this month by giving patrons a discount under the new ordinance, which has not legally gone into effect.

That since ex-President Cleveland will soon be in this section of the country, it would not be out of place for the democrats of Toledo to invite him to a reception here.

That President W. I. Squire will have no difficulty in securing a re-election to the chieftaincy of the republican clubs of Ohio at the confab to be held at Columbus this week.

That would-be constables are happy that enough signatures have been secured for a call to hold a joint session. The successful man will have a lien on the coming city convention.

That Fogarty has become bold enough to proclaim that none of the candidates for police clerk will make even a respectable showing against him in the republican convention.

That there is war among the republican brethren over the turning down of George Fields for penitentiary director. Colored voters are only appreciated at election times by the republican party.

That Henry Tracy's entrance as a candidate for oil inspector will further complicate matters for Toledo aspirants, and as a consequence, it is just probable none of the boys will have a pole long enough to knock the persimmons.

SCOTCHED AGAIN.

Judge Millard Writes a Manly Letter

To Superintendent Tupper of the Asylum with Relation to an Alleged Interview on the Institution.

The Blade continues its vaporings relative to the Toledo Insane Asylum at every presentation of the slightest opportunity, and is not particularly bothered as to the grounds for the same.

In its last issue an interview with Judge Millard is purported to be given, which is so far away from anything in the Judge's make-up that he promptly disclaims the authorship.

It gives the Bee pleasure to print the following correspondence, which speaks for itself, and from which readers may draw their own conclusion:

Toledo, Feb. 6, 1892.

To the Editor: Upon the receipt this evening of the enclosed letter from Judge Millard my attention for the first time was called to a criticism of the asylum management published in yesterday's Blade, which is so false that the Judge promptly disowns the authorship attributed to him over his own signature, which with the balance of his letter referring to others matters is so honorable to him as a gentleman, that I send it to the Bee for publication, and wish to publicly thank him for his manly letter.

Very respectfully,
C. E. TUPPER.

The following is Judge Millard's letter:

Toledo, O., Feb. 6, 1892.

Dr. C. E. Tupper, Superintendent, Toledo, O.:

Dear Sir—I do not know as newspaper criticism hurts you any, but it does annoy me when I see myself quoted as expressing opinions which are then known to me for the first time. There seems to be a disposition on the part of some reporters to "nag" you a little, and if the remarks can be attributed to another it helps them. So far as the talk attributed to me in last evening's Blade is concerned it was largely true as confined to the infirmary board, and was in no way applicable or intended for the asylum. The former board being made up of personal friends, and the talk about them being among personal and political friends, we were, perhaps, a little free in poking fun at them, but I want to say to you once and for all that I never have and never intend to criticise an institution about which I know nothing, and I am satisfied that you are conscientiously discharging your duties as superintendent to the satisfaction of those who know what you are doing. I don't want you to feel that the probate court is taking any hand in this annoyance.

Very truly yours,
I. I. MILLARD.

SET ASIDE THE VERDICT.

An Important Ruling in the Whitney & Tracy Case.

Judge Lemmon Holds That Doria Tracy is Not Responsible for the Indebtedness of the Firm.

The common pleas court to-day sustained the motion for a new trial in the case of John P. Allison against Whitney and Tracy, and set the verdict of the jury aside.

The case is a very important one as it not only involves $80,000, but establishes the difference between a general and special partner.

This suit was brought to establish a partner's liability against Doria Tracy as a special partner of the firm of Whitney and Tracy, and to hold him liable for the indebtedness of the firm. This case was hotly contested, for on the result, depended the success or failure of 20 other cases of a similar nature pending in common pleas court. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff.

This verdict Judge Lemmon set aside on the ground that evidence introduced was not sufficient to hold Doria Tracy

DOINGS IN DEFIANCE.

The Snook-Sutphen Judicial Contest.

Will the Voice of the People be Respected?

Grand Jury Findings—Diphtheria Raging—Normal School for Hicksville—General Mention.

Defiance, O., Feb. 8.—(Special)—Being asked concerning his chances of success in the Snook-Sutphen judicial contest, Judge Sutphen said to your correspondent to-day, that the state senate might adopt any uniform rule it saw fit for the counting of the contested ballots and he would then have a majority of not less than four or five votes; and that it was impossible for the senators to count him out and seat Mr. Snook without stultifying themselves.

Hon. W. D. Hill claims Judge Sutphen elected by 10 majority, but says the result depends entirely upon the construction the senate places on certain sections of the law regarding the counting of certain kinds of votes found on either side and alleged to be illegal.

Until this rule of procedure is decided upon, Mr. Hill thinks everything is uncertain.

Democrats here have little faith in the ability of the senate to rise above the greed of party in the decision of the case, and generally concede, whether elected or not, Mr. Snook will get the office. For the majority is too small to long baffle the partisan purposes of the republican side of the senate chamber.

Normal School.

Just now there is considerable of an excitement at Hicksville over the prospect of establishing a normal school there.

The citizens of that town and township held a monstrous mass meeting there last Friday, in which the sentiment was unanimous for the school, and for securing a special act of the legislature for the privilege of bonding the town and township for $25,000 for the purpose of establishing a township high school.

The Ada, O., normal school was established the same way. A legislative committee, to secure the necessary legislation, has been appointed, consisting of Rev. J. Wesner, Attorney J. F. Coulter, Editor J. E. Coburn, County School examiner W. F. Caughar and Rev. J. W. Lilly.

Diphtheria.

Diphtheria has closed the school in subdistrict seven, Adams township. One child took sick in school last Thursday and it is feared the whole neighborhood is exposed. The Evansport schools west of there have just resumed again after a vacation of many weeks for the same cause, and which resulted in several deaths in that vicinity.

The Grand Jury.

The grand jury for the February term completed its labors and returned six true bills after examination of 50 witnesses.

The indictments found, as made public, are Frank L. Forlow, for forgery and embezzlement; Grant Cupp, for burglary; Guy Murphy for burglary, and Samuel Dea, a farmer, for selling impure provisions.

Double Funeral.

Two children of Charles Hornung, near New Bavaria, died Thursday and Friday at the same hour (4 o'clock), just 24 hours apart, with the grip, and will be buried to-day at New Bavaria in the same coffin. The entire family are confined to their beds with the disease.

Pioneer Dead.

John Carpenter, one of the oldest pioneers of Adams township, and a highly respected citizen, was buried yesterday. He died of the grip last Friday, aged 78 years.

"THAT'S DIFFERENT."

One of Gunckel's Latest Fish Tales.

The Contest John Sanfleet, a Local Fisherman, Had in Landing a Black Bass—Two Keel Over Exhausted.

Mr. John E. Gunckel, in the current number of Forest and Stream has one of his well known stories, based on facts not to be disputed, which will repay perusal. It follows:

In the star chamber of the Ohio Yacht club, the other evening, several well known local anglers were relating their last summer's fishing experiences, and among the interesting incidents the following was told, the sequel of which may be of value to many anglers who complain of always losing the largest fish. Two gentlemen were fishing for bass in the waters of Ten-Mile creek, a tributary to lake Erie, when the stouter of the two, weighing about 225, was startled to see his sea-grass line move rapidly toward the deep water, the general movement indicating a large fish. At the proper time to jerk he rose to his feet and hooked the fish. When he jerked it seems the fish was near or under the boat, and instantly made a terrible leap out of the water. His companion at once cried out, "It's a dogfish, take these scissors and cut the line—let him go." The fish had taken advantage of this parley and nearly emptied the reel. "Oh, no," replied the angler, "I will show you how to land a large fish scientifically."

No fisherman who ever landed black bass among the many islands of lake Erie could have handled this fish with so much coolness and according to the rules laid down in books, as did this gentleman. The line was kept taut, the fish was permitted to move up stream, then down, and a happier angler never cast a line than this fisherman. There was not that look of anxiety that creeps over a man's features when he is playing an unknown fish, but a broad smile extending from ear to ear, while his companion was carelessly feeling the nibble of an ounce perch. There was no trouble for him to land the fish at any moment, but he wanted to "practice playing him." Suddenly, as if by magic, the fish came around near the boat and made another leap out of the water in full view of the angler

"My! Walcott, it's a black bass," cried Sanfleet, taking a firmer hold of his rod. "That's different."

Walcott dropped his rod, upset the lunch basket and lost the string of fish to which he was adding a recently caught perch. "It will weigh six pounds," he said, "try him in this landing net."

"There is quite a difference between a black bass and an old dogfish. See him run! Look at him try to get in the grass! Not much, my fine fellow," said Sanfleet, jumping about the boat. His usual rosy cheeks had an autumn color, and from the excitement wound the reel the wrong way. This bass seemed to know the difference, for he certainly had more strength and performed more deceiving and difficult movements than any fish the gentlemen had ever seen. The lancewood tip was instantly broken; ten minutes later the second joint was snapped, and it was all Walcott could do to keep in the boat. There was never a black bass hooked which had so much sport with two gentlemen as this one. It took five minutes to conquer him under the name of dogfish and over half an hour to bring him within reach of the landing net as a black bass. Not a joint in the rod was whole, and as a last resort the fish had to be pulled in "hand over hand."

In the bottom of the boat lay a large-mouthed black bass which weighed a few ounces over five pounds; the largest ever caught in the creek. But he worried the two anglers until they fell exhausted in the boat. Sanfleet says, "It's an easy matter to land a six-pound dogfish, but a broad-shouldered, intelligent black bass—that's different."

A GEORGIA SHOOTING.

Camilla, Ga., Feb. 8.—In a quarrel in a disreputable house near here late Saturday night, Aaron Jackson shot and killed Jasper Singleton.

He then fired at another man named Roman Jackson, the ball entering his breast and causing a wound from which he died an hour later.

Aaron Jackson next shot Bradley Everett, inflicting a wound which may prove fatal. The murderer was arrested and as excitement runs high, a lynching may occur.

SO IT IS TRUE.

Here's a friend who says that sorrow
Comes to-day or comes to-morrow,
Here's a longface who is moaning!
Tell him death is far away!
Let dull age go weep and pray;
Heed not grief, the ghost there, groaning,
Who would cloud the jocund day!

Ah, they say that anguish found them,
Men cut down with battle round them—
(Hear the boys there gayly singing!)
In some region far away!
What care we who laugh to-day?
Bring no tears, whate'er you're bringing;
Honor to the jocund day!

What's that sound that cools our laughter?
What's that form that follows after?
Funeral music sadly sounded—
One more man is turned to clay. * * *
Let dull age go weep and pray!
Youth by death was ne'er confounded,
Long shall shine our jocund day!

Oh, my dear one, to my weeping
Marble silence sternly keeping,
Lying there in breathless blindness—
Death is never far away. * * *
Even youth can weep and pray!
Lips that loved have lost their kindness;
Dead are they, this bitter day!

Near Olympia, Wash., is a well that is coming gradually to the surface. It is between twenty and thirty feet in depth. For some time the brick wall of the well has been protruding through the ground, until now it sticks up into the air like a funnel to the height of ten or fifteen feet.

The motto: "We Have Been," stands below the crest of the Marquis Ailesbury, who is about to sell a portion of the ancestral estates. It might appropriately be amended by adding the words "there many a time." But many people never get far enough along to ever adopt even the first part of the motto.

When Queen Victoria's dogs die they are laid to rest beneath the turf where they gamboled as puppies and were exercised when they grew up. Each little grave is marked by a stone tablet about a foot long and eight inches across, whereon a few words are engraved, giving the name and date of death.

A new kind of porcelain has recently been made in Paris in the following manner: Asbestos is ground to a fine powder, freed from oxide of iron by means of sulphuric or hydrochloric acid, then made into a paste, molded and dried. It is then baked for seventeen or eighteen hours at a temperature of 1,200 degrees centigrade.

Unless the law prevents, the Adirondack region will soon be stripped of its best forests. During last year there were 300,000,000 feet of timber cut in the Adirondack forests. Of the whole quantity, two-thirds was made into lumber and the remainder into paper pulp, and all by the wood pulp mills in the Adirondack region, the product being 109,200 tons of wood pulp.

The use of crude oil for fuel in Chicago has grown to such an extent that the insurance companies have been compelled to recognize its employment in industrial works. The Chicago Fire Underwriters' association have fought against the use of this fuel for a long time, but they have been compelled to accept the situation, and have promulgated a set of rules to govern its use.

The ingenious electrical device that was patented a short time ago for giving an alarm when a ship deviates from her course is now being adopted by a number of American vessels. In this arrangement the compass cord carries a light wire connected with a metallic cup containing mercury, so that if the ship departs from the set course an electrical contact is made which rings a bell in the captain's room.

Mr. Littledale, who has just crossed the mountainous Parmir in central Asia, says mountain scenery there is quite different from mountain scenery in Switzerland and Caucasia, where, when the eye is tired of resting on the grand icy scenery above, it finds a pleasant change by turning to the green pastures and the forests below. In Central Asia, however, although the mountains are higher, the glaciers, owing to the puny snowfall, are much smaller, while below the mountain, instead of verdant fields and forests, is a picture of utter desolation that would be hard to match in any other part of the world.

Some of the Maine coast dwellers are no better off in respect to school and church privileges than the people of the remote Aroostook wilderness, who never see anything much except trees and bears. A man who lives on Great Diamond Island, Portland lower harbor, has three children of school age, but there is no school on Grand Diamond, and therefore he appealed to the mayor of Portland for assistance in the matter. It has been arranged that the children shall be transported daily, at the city's expense, to Peak's Island, where there is a school. It isn't every poor family who have a private steamboat at their disposal daily, as in this case, and the children enjoy the distinction about as much as they do the trip.

AN INSPECTOR NEEDED,

Says Fire Chief Wall in His Annual Report.

The Fire and Electrical Departments in Most Excellent Condition —Some Statistics.

The fire commissioners held their regular meeting Saturday afternoon. The annual reports of the fire and electric departments were submitted and received.

Chief Wall's report showed 254 alarms responded to; total loss by fire, $203,126.11; total insurance, 1,612,935.30.

During 1890 the loss by fire was $240,738.53, a decrease of $37,612.42.

This is a splendid showing in view of the fact that there was a greater number of fires during 1891.

The loss during the last ten years amounts to $2,531,597.06, of which $2,172,294.32 was reimbursed by insurance.

The following statement shows the receipts and disbursements of the fire department for the year:

Receipts.

Balance in city treasury Jan. 1, 1892	$ 6,295.82
Tax collection	55,540.42
Rent of Water street engine house	200.04

Fire alarm telegraph	2,004.57
Total	$61,291.56

The report included the following with regard to the necessity of a building inspector in Toledo:

Our fire limits should be established with a view of protection to the thickly settled business portion of the city. A citizen who will erect a good stone or brick building should be protected against the erection of a frame structure within a few feet of his. The frame structure usually is covered with sheet iron, has a pretense of protection or to keep within the bounds of the fire ordinance. The necessity for a building law and a building inspector is apparent. All buildings should be inspected while in course of construction as the dangerous and carelessly constructed parts are covered when the building is finished. I think this is a very important matter and that no time should be lost in having the proper legislation enacted.

Superintendent McNamar's report was complete, the electrical department being in excellent condition.

BROADWAY METHODISTS

Getting Into Shape to Erect a New Church.

Building Committee Appointed and Will Meet This Week to Start the Ball Rolling.

A handsome new Methodist church is among the probable improvements on Broadway for the approaching season.

The congregation has increased to such an extent as to severely test the capacity of the old church. Its members are live, energetic citizens and are not content to hang onto the apron strings of progress, and are now preparing to stride ahead and keep abreast of the times.

The members have long appreciated the necessity of a new church and have been working hard to this end all the while. They now feel almost in position to go ahead with the project, and steps in this direction have been started.

A building committee has been appointed, which is called to meet this week, and other preliminaries are being perfected.

It is safe to predict that the project will be pushed to a successful consummation. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Bethards, is a worker who knows no such word as fail, and with the hearty co-operation of the strong and ambitious congregation the church will surely be erected.

PREVENTION IS BETTER

Than cure, and those who are subject to rheumatism can prevent attacks by keeping the blood pure and free from the acid which causes the disease. For this purpose Hood's Sarsaparilla is used with great success.

SENTENCED FOR LIBEL.

Painesville, O., Feb. 8.—Judge L. S. Sherman sentenced Robert N. Traver, editor of the Lake County Advertiser, convicted of publishing a libel upon Prosecuting Attorney Harper during last fall's campaign, to sixty days' imprisonment in the county jail and a fine of $200 and costs, to stand committed until fine and costs are paid.

DEAD SEA FRUITS.

They slay multitudes when they are the product of neglect and incipient disease. A "slight" cold, a fit of indigestion, biliousness or constipation each or any of these "minor ailments" advance in many cases with "league-destroying strides." Give them a swift, early defeat with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and avert the danger. Abernethy administered an alarming rebuke to the man who informed him that he had "only a cold!" "Only a cold," repeated the doctor. "What would ye have—the plague!" Rheumatism and la grippe are easily extinguishable at the start. Why then allow them to get a full head of steam? Put on the brakes with the Bitters. The genial warmth which this superb medicine diffuses through the system, the impetus it gives to the circulation of the blood, its soothing and strengthening effect upon the nervous, specially recommend it to the enfeebled and sick. 'Tis the great specific for malaria.

DREW LOTS FOR A VERDICT.

Jury in the Fitzsimmons Case Finds an Easy Method of Settling.

Ottumwa, Ia., Feb. 8.—In the Ed. Fitzsimmons case in court a genuine sensation was unearthed, being nothing less than that the verdict was reached by drawing lots.

The plea of insanity had been set up in this case and several expert witnesses examined. A verdict of guilty was rendered, but the jurors subsequently made affidavits that Fitzsimmons was charged with burglary. Twelve ballots were made, on six of which the word "guilty" was written and on the other six the word "insanity."

These ballots were placed in a hat, and by agreement, one of the jurors, standing with his back to the hat containing the ballots, drew out one ballot, upon which the word "guilty" appeared, and this was the verdict of the jury, arrived at in the manner above set out.

The jurymen were put on the witness stand and the testimony given there sustained the statements set forth in the affidavit. The case is without a parallel, and created the greatest sensation in the court room. After several persons had been examined, all of whom verified the statements made in the affidavit, Judge Babb set aside the verdict and granted a motion for a new trial.

Baby

Your Baby: sick all last night—cross this morning; colic hurts; little hands clutch the air; the wee body twists, the tender stomach is big with flatulence.

Helpless! Hours before the doctor can come; what is to be done?

Dr. Hand has the remedy for Baby. He had it 25 years ago, but it wasn't so well known then.

It stops colic short metre, gives the little one rest—gives the family a rest.

A little Book, illustrated, full of sense and suggestion, will be sent to any one in the land FREE. It tells you how to do your part in caring for Baby. Dr. Hand's Colic Cure is 25 cents a bottle—it's worth $25 in an emergency. 25 cents in stamps gets it. If you want a trial bottle, or a free book, address

WAKE UP.

If you wake up in the morning with a bitter or bad taste in your mouth, Languor, Dull Headache, Despondency, Constipation, take Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the bilious stomach, sweetens the breath and cleanses the furred tongue. Children as well as adults sometimes eat something that does not digest well, producing Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Restlessness, or Sleeplessness—a good dose of Regulator will give relief. So perfectly harmless is this remedy that it can be taken by the youngest infant or the most delicate person without injury, no matter what the condition of the system may be. It can do no harm if it does no good, but its reputation for 40 years proves it never fails in doing good.

A HEAP OF RUINS

All That is Left of the Hotel Royal.

Terrible Conflagration in New York Sunday.

A Hundred Lives Believed to Have Been Lost.

Hunting in the Ashes for the Dead.

A Metropolitan Tinder Box Furnishes a Place for the Flames to Hold High Carnival at the Expense of Human Life.

New York, Feb. 8.—A disaster appalling in horror, bringing to mind the terrible occurrences in Park Place, still fresh in the public mind, occurred in this city Sunday morning.

The Hotel Royal, that well-known landmark which has stood for more than a quarter of a century at the southeast corner of Sixth avenue and Fortieth street, was burned to the ground and a large number of people were burned, suffocated and crushed in the ruins.

At the time of the disaster there were nearly 150 guests in the hotel. The hotel employes all told number 55. Of this number of people five have thus far been found dead, six are in the hospital and 63 have been reported alive.

One hundred are still missing. The number of dead will probably not exceed, at a later estimate, 30. The scenes were heartrending, and appalled even the firemen and policemen, who are used to such terrible scenes.

Soon after the fire broke out ambulances arrived from the various hospitals, and many physicians whose residences are in the neighborhood were quickly on the scene and did all they could to relieve the injured.

Nearly every one of the 124 rooms which the hotel has on its five floors was occupied Saturday night by guests, many of them transient, in fact, all the rooms save four had been taken at 1 o'clock when Richard Meares, the proprietor, went to bed.

When the flames burst forth from some unknown origin near the elevator shaft the entire building was instantly enveloped in flames.

The dead, missing and injured are reported as follows:

The Dead.

Unknown woman, 40 years old, fractured skull and slightly burned. She is supposed to have jumped from a window and killed herself. Body at the morgue.

Unknown woman, about 28, good looking, light complexion, wore an abundance of jewelry; burned and suffocated; body at morgue.

Unknown man, about 35 years old, dark brown hair; jumped from window; head smashed in pieces. Smooth face, about five feet nine inches in height, weighed about 180 pounds; wore linen nightshirt and trousers. Body at morgue.

Unknown man, good-looking, about 45 years old, had on striped silk undershirt, light brown stripes. Evidently a Hebrew. Body at morgue.

Henry C. Levy, of the firm of Levy, Strauss & Freeman, 707 Broadway, wholesale clothiers; identified by his brother, H. J. Levy, at the morgue.

Clarence W. Klein, 39 years old, single; lawyer, Hazleton, Pa.; suffocated and burned; injuries not fatal. Taken to Bellevue hospital.

Walter L. Yates, 60 years old, clothier of Philadelphia; condition serious; burns and contusions. Bellevue hospital.

The Rescued.

W. G. Buchanan, C. S. Sonby, Rupert Lamont, C. Kramer, E. B. Reynolds and wife, E. C. Cockburn, E. C. Allen, O. Sepler, C. White, E. G. Harding, W. H. Scott and wife, Langdon Smith, G. S. McGee, Jas. E. Corey, Mrs. J. Titus, Mrs. S. Knapp of Chicago. All of these escaped from the burning building and were taken to the Gedney house. P. Taylor, H. P. Tompkins, W. C. Pearce were rescued and taken to the Hotel Metropole, four blocks away.

When First Discovered.

At 3:05 o'clock Mrs. Isabella Meares, wife of Richard Meares, proprietor of the hotel, awakened her husband, telling him the house was on fire. She heard the crackling of the flames and saw smoke coming through the crevices of their bedroom door. Mr. Meares had only retired at 1 o'clock and was aroused and ran into the hallway. Volumes of smoke filled the halls, and the flames were making their way rapidly up the elevator shaft. Their apartments were on the third floor and forty feet from the stairway. One glance at the situation was enough to tell him the story.

He ran back to his wife's room and shouted, "Now you follow me," snatched up a coat and again ran into the hallway. He fought his way straight to the staircase, supposing that his wife was close behind him. The passageway was choked with dense smoke, which almost strangled him. Then, throwing his overcoat over his head to prevent suffocation, bent his head low and groped his way to the banisters, on which he placed his left hand.

Flames were shooting up from below. His hand which was on the railing was burned and his hair was singed. His situation was perilous. To run down the stairs for two flights meant death, and so he, swinging himself over the hand rail, dropped 20 feet to the ground floor. He landed on his feet without a broken bone and made his way to the street.

Mr. Meares was among the first to leave the burning building, and when he made his exit not a fire engine had arrived. But even in those few minutes the flames had gotten their grip on the fated structure, and fire was shooting from all the windows of the upper floors.

When Mr. Meares reached safety in the street then he realized that his wife was not with him. At that moment a hook and ladder arrived. Meares implored them to save his wife. A ladder was quickly placed in position to a window which he said was his wife's room. Up the ladder Policeman Merritt ran. The window selected was not the right room. It was an unknown woman, who quickly stepped out on the ladder and was carried down in safety.

Then the ladder was placed against the window of Mrs. Meares' room. A young man ran nimbly up to help save the woman, who had already stepped upon the ladder. Meares ran up the ladder too, and stepped off to the roof of the veranda over the entrance to the office to steady his wife when she came down. She was very nervous and in making the descent slipped and fell to the sidewalk. She was picked up with a sprained ankle and several body bruises.

In the meantime Policeman Gallagher had rung in an alarm which was followed by two calls for ambulances. The scenes at the fire before the fire companies arrived were heartrending.

One man whose name is unknown sprang from a third-story window and was dashed to death on the ground below. People turned their faces away horrified at the sight.

This was on the Sixth avenue side of the building. A moment later another man leaped from a window on the Fortieth side and was killed. Shortly afterward two women jumped from windows on the Sixth avenue side and were dead when picked up. Their bodies was taken to the Thirtieth street station house, and afterwards, unidentified, removed to the morgue.

At that hour the known dead numbered four. Several others had dropped from windows or slid down ropes, with which the rooms in the hotel were provided, and escaped with severe burns, while many more had been injured in the same way, making their escape by the fire escapes and were in the hands of ambulance surgeons who had been summoned from Bellevue hospital and New York hospital. The surgeons had their hands full taking care of the injured and maimed.

All this time the fire was raging fiercely, and it was plain to be seen that the building was doomed.

The structure burned like so much kindling wood. The work of rescuing the guests still went on, and many were taken from the windows by fire men and policemen.

Sergeant Ward and Patrolman Phillips, of fire patrol No. 2, went into a room on the fourth floor front and brought Walter H. Phelps and wife down a ladder safely.

They succeeded in saving Mrs. Samuel Kniff, who was about to leap from one of the windows on the forth floor.

Mr. Frederick Uhlmann, the dealer in hops, has been a guest at the hotel Royal for years and lived with his brother Simon and mother. The latter yesterday went to their country residence at Lakewood, N. J.

Mr. Ulhmann had gone to bed shortly after 1 o'clock and was sleeping soundly when he was rudely awakened by the uproar, screams and shouts for help of the inmates of the house. He ran from his room on the second floor, which was directly over the office, into the hall. He found it filled with smoke and was forced back into his room.

Again he made an attempt and falling over some obstruction in the passageway, succeeded in making his way down the one flight of stairs into the street below. He escaped with only an overcoat to cover his nakedness. Mr. Ulhmann lost everything in his room, including $12,000 in cash. Several checks and notes and other valuable business documents were lost. Despite his loss, however, Mr. Ulhmann was cheerful to-day, for as he said: "If my mother and brother had not gone away on Saturday they would have been burned."

Among the narrow escapes was that of Mr. H. C. Tompkins of this city, who was a transient guest at the hotel. He was awakened from his slumbers by the cry of fire. He got up and went into the hallway, but escape down the stairs was impossible. Mr. Tompkins kept his head about him and collecting all his valuables escaped out of one of the windows down a rope. In descending the flames from the second story windows burned his hands slightly and scorched his hair.

Mrs. F. Knapp, of Chicago, had a room on the fifth floor. She had presence of mind enough to wrap a wet towel around her head to prevent being suffocated, and went to the window and waited until rescued by a policeman.

Mrs. Kueper and daughter, of Flemington, N. J., occupied a room on the third floor front. They registered at the hotel yesterday. They were taken from their room down a ladder by the firemen. They lost all their clothing save the nightdresses which they had on, and were cared for by Mrs. S. Knight, of West Fortieth street. Mrs. Kueper suffered from the shock and Miss Kueper's long black hair was singed by the flames which burst over her head as she stepped on the ladder.

Mrs. Knight made a temporary hospital of her flat and had no less than nine homeless people there at one time. Among those who accepted the hospitality was a young man named Levy who slid down a rope, tearing the flesh to the bone. These escapes occurred before the walls of the building fell while the firemen were doing their utmost to stop the progress of the flames which threatened to envelop the adjoining buildings.

When the walls fell people were seen at several windows on the top floor, crying for help, but they fell back, and were soon buried in the ruins.

The flames of the burning building illuminated the sky for miles around and drew to the scene, which during the entire day was an object of curiosity, an immense throng of people.

The fire lines were strictly drawn and maintained during the entire day and none save a person authorized to enter by reason of his official position was allowed within the prescribed boundaries.

The Hotel Royal was built more than 25 years ago. It was formerly kept by Messrs Perris & Butler, but Mr. Meares leased it 13 years ago. In 1882 the building was remodeled and an addition was made on the south side. The house was the home of many people in the theatrical profession and was patronized chiefly by transients for a night. Many families made it, however, their permanent place of residence. The elaborate restaurant was liberally patronized by the class of people who kept late hours in the upper part of the Tenderloin district.

After the fire had sufficiently cooled to permit a partial examination of the ruins a search was made for the dead. The search was at once rewarded by the finding of a charred body almost burned to a crisp. It was unrecognizable, but was identified as that of Henry J. Levy, from a ring on one of the fingers.

The walls were in a dangerous condition and it was deemed necessary to pull them down before continuing the search for the dead. A force of 100 men will be put to work early to-morrow morning clearing away the debris.

The loss on the hotel and furniture is estimated at $250,000. The building is owned by Hyman Israel, furniture dealer on the Bowery.

The Ruins.

Before the search for possible victims could be begun it was necessary for the firemen to throw down the walls that were yet standing. These were few, but were so weak that a close approach to them was a matter of grave danger. The rear part of the Fortieth street wall and the partition walls running parallel with Sixth avenue had been left standing almost entire, like blackened skeletons with great black holes where the windows and doors had been and portions of a fire escape clinging to them in grim irony. About half of the south division wall remained, showing where a dozen fire places had been. At its base was a large mirror, still uncracked, which had adorned the office. All the other walls had fallen in the mass of ruins in which the hotel and its contents, with possibly many bodies, had been engulfed.

Pulling Down the Walls.

The crowds found fascination in watching the efforts of the firemen to throw down the two dangerous patition walls. The outer one extended to the roof, and was, at its top, a mass of brick and mortar, with a single chimney standing, which tottered at almost every touch of the weakened walls. Few of the watching thousands would have consented to change places with the hardy firemen, who mounted the scaling ladder to the crumbling summit of that insecure mass and dexterously threw the rope so that it encircled the wall. When this was adjusted 30 men bent themselves to the task of overthrowing the wall. Danger lines were established and all traffic on the Sixth avenue street car line was stopped. The ruined wall was stronger than had been thought and it took fully half an hour to send it crashing into the pile of wreckage beneath.

Origin of the Fire Unknown.

The origin of the fire is unknown. It started in the basement near the elevator shaft, which was located in the middle of the building. The flames were first seen pouring out of the cupola on the roof, directly over the elevator shaft, by an engineer on the Sixth avenue elevated railroad train, who stopped his engine directly in front of the hotel and blew the locomotive's whistle loud and continuously. This unusual sound awoke many of the sleeping people in the hotel and brought policemen to the scene, who at once sent out a fire alarm from a nearby signal box.

Meanwhile the employes of the hotel on night duty sought to arouse the guests by their cries of "fire." So rapidly, however, did the flames increase that it seemed an age before the firemen arrived, although the first apparatus rattled up to the scene within a few minutes after the alarm was sent in. The desperate character of the fire became apparent to the fire chief in charge, who promptly rung three more alarms in quick succession.

When the flames were finally gotten under control there was a general inquiry as to who had taken lodgings at the hotel and who had gotten out in safety. Neither the proprietor nor attaches could give the names of but a few of their personal acquaintances. Then a call was naturally made for the hotel register. It could not be found, although it was not apparent that it had destroyed. Search was instituted, and an enterprising newspaper man was found making off with it, thinking thereby, doubtless, to secure a "beat" on his contemporaries by printing the exclusive list of names. But he was despoiled of his prize and may have to answer to a charge of larceny in the bargain.

The Proprietor's Story.

Mr. Richard Meares, the landlord and proprietor of the Hotel Royal was seen shortly after the fire was gotten under control and he told of his own escape, of that of his wife, and related various incidents in connection therewith. He was in the office during the latter part of Saturday evening. He went to the clerk's desk at about 12:30 and ascertained that all but four of the 110 rooms and suites in the house had been taken. He estimated that there were about 130 to 140 people in the house, all told, at that hour; he learned later, he said, that the other four rooms were taken before 1 a. m. Mr. Meares was very tired, having been at Long Branch and walking about a great deal during the day, and when he retired at 1 a. m. he fell asleep and slept very soundly. He was awakened by his wife, who shook him, exclaiming: "Wake up, wake up, the house is on fire."

He sprang up and heard an ominous roaring outside the door. He rushed into the hallway of the third floor, where his room was located, and found the elevator shaft at the end of the hall a roaring flue of leaping, crackling flames.

The stairways were free and rushing back he hurriedly threw on his trousers and waistcoat over his night shirt, thrust his feet into an old pair of shoes, and calling to his wife, who had hurriedly donned a wrapper, to follow, he again left the room intending to go down the stairway. Although less than a minute had elapsed since Mr. Meares discovered the flames, they had now spread till the stairways were a roaring, seething mass. Stopping not to count the cost, Mr. Meares wrapped his coat closely about him, swung over the blistering balustrade and dropped to the floor below, whence he groped his way to the office floor and out upon the street. No one was in sight.

Overhead the flames were leaping from the elevator cupola in great sheets. Then a hook and ladder truck dashed up. Engine bells clanged and a score of steel shod hoofs sent reverberating echoes through the deserted streets.

Of a sudden the air was filled with shouts and cries of distress. The inmates of the great hostlery had awakened to a sense of their danger. Heads appeared at every window quickly followed by puffs of smoke and tongues of flames. Amid the babel of voices Mr. Meares detected a familiar cry. He appealed to the foreman of the ladder truck and in an instant the top of a 30 foot ladder rested upon a window ledge.

Pushing aside the firemen the landlord scaled the ladder himself. He found he had mistaken the window but he saved a life, for he took down a half-senseless, white-robed figure, and then turned the ladder twice over till it stood beneath his wife's window. This time a slender young man, a stranger, was too quick for him, beating him to the window by half the length of the ladder, and Mr. Meares had barely reached the coping of the front entrance when the self-constituted life-saver had his wife in his arms and was making his way painfully to the ground. Halfway down either the young man missed his footing or his strength gave out, for he dropped his burden which fell to the pavement and lay motionless while firemen lifted the unconscious form and bore it across the street. Half-crazed the husband says he did not know whether he fell or whether he clambered down the ladder. But he started to find his wife when a big policeman with a heavy black beard, whose name he says he would give a considerable sum to ascertain, stopped him and demanded to know his name.

"I'm the proprietor of the hotel," he replied, "and I'm looking for my wife." At this he says the officer shouted to a fellow policeman, saying:

"Here is the owner of that building. Don't you think he'd better be looking after his house instead of his wife?"

At this they laughed, and despite his urgent entreaties he was not permitted to follow Mrs. Meares, and it was not till an hour and fifty minutes that he learned her fate. Then, through the kindness of Capt. Reilly, of the Thirtieth street station, he ascertained that she had been removed to Bellevue hospital.

Mr. Meares said that the spectacle for 20 minutes after he reached the street was beyond his powers of portrayal. Men and women at the upper windows clad only in robes de nuit shrieked and gesticulated frantically, and were only prevented from jumping by the firemen, who shouted encouragement to them. But the flames waxed fiercer, and presently a human form plunged from the fourth story and struck the pavement head foremost with a sickening crash, while blood and brains splashed upon the clothing of the bystanders. Mr. Meares said he could stand no more and he got away from the horrible spot as quickly as possible. He was not badly injured aside from a severe burn on the back of his right hand. But the hair was burned from the back of his head, showing his close proximity to the flames.

Mrs. Meares' injuries, though painful, were not thought to be critical.

Marvelous Escape.

There was not even a rope fire escape in the room on the second floor which Felix Kraemer, a salesman for Steinway & Sons, New York, occupied, and had it not been for Mr. Kraemer's experience at hotel fires he probably would have been numbered among the victims.

"Had I not had a strong umbrella, I should either have been burned or killed by jumping," said Mr. Kraemer. "I have been burned out at hotels three times now. I was burned out at a hotel at Warrensburg, Mo., and also at Ellsworth, Ks., and I learned something about how to act when at a fire on those two occasions.

"At the fire at Warrensburg a guest escaped by using an open umbrella to ease his flight from an upper story window. I never forgot the way in which he escaped, and since that time I have always been provided with a strong umbrella for an emergency like that which presented itself this morning.

"As soon as I reached the window on the third floor I opened my strong umbrella quickly, and carefully put the shawl strap over it to prevent it turning inside out. Then I made a leap. I did not go sailing gracefully out into the air and land lightly on the ground beneath, but I landed without any broken limbs, and am all right now.

"The umbrella partially turned inside out just before I reached the ground, and I got something of a jar, but I should think myself lucky if I escaped with a broken leg, for I never before saw a fire burn so fiercely as the one which consumed the hotel. I ran into the office as soon as I reached the ground. I was the first person to get out of the hotel, and I cannot imagine how any of the other guests got out alive. I saw Mr. Mears and the night clerk in the office. 'For God's sake,' I said, 'why don't you turn in a fire alarm?' I went to the Gedney house, registered, secured a suit of clothes which did not fit me, and returned to the fire.

"Even at that time the fire department had not arrived, and men, women and children were at the windows screaming for some one to save them. I saw two or three people jump from the windows. It was ten minutes after I returned to the fire before a ladder was raised to any of the windows.

"I heard there were more than 160 people in the house when I got out, and I cannot understand how more than 20 of them escaped with their lives. It will be a difficult matter to convince me that many of them were not roasted. There was a court in the rear of the hotel, and many of the windows of the inside rooms overlooked it. Here, I believe, dozens of people lost their lives."

Tragic Scenes.

The guest who probably had the most narrow and at the same time the most marvelous escape was M. L. Harman, a traveling salesman for a St. Louis wholesale grocery house. He registered at the hotel on Saturday evening with his wife.

"I had a room on the sixth floor," said Mr. Harman, "and was aroused from sleep by a loud, roaring noise and by the sound of a whistle which I think was from one of the engines on the elevated road. I opened my door and discovered that the stairway leading to the lower floors was in a blaze. The hallway was filled with smoke, and as it poured into my room as long as the door was opened I quickly closed it, knowing there was no escape that way. I then went to the window and opened it, and there seemed to be as much smoke on the outside as there was in the hallway, for the room soon filled with the smoke from that direction. Both my wife and I would have been suffocated in the room had I not taken two towels which I soaked with water. These we used to keep the smoke out of our lungs by holding them over our mouths and nostrils. I tried to find a fire escape near our window, but there was none, and I thought that at one time we should never get out of the room alive. It was certain death to jump six stories, and as it was either that or burn to death I said to my wife.

"'Mattie, I am going to shoot you and then kill myself.'

"I concluded that it would be better to die that way than burn to death, and as I always sleep with a revolver under my pillow. I hurried to the bed to get it. By this time the flames were coming up through the cracks in the floor and through the cracks of the door. Just as I was about to shoot my wife the floor fell with a crash and we went down probably two stories. The flooring stopped opposite a window and my wife jumped out and landed on the portico beneath. A rope was hanging out of this window and with this assistance I managed to get down another story, but here I slipped and fell to the portico beside my wife. I picked her up, but was unable to carry her, and as I was almost suffocated and the fall had injured me, I was endeavoring to reach a ladder and try to carry her down to the street, when two firemen took her from me. How I reached the street I do not know."

Mr. Harman is confined to his bed at the Gedney House. His hands and chest are severely burned and his hair and eyebrows are singed. He was told yesterday that his wife was being cared for at one of the hospitals and that she was not fatally injured. It is believed, however, that she is one of the dead.

Hard to Learn the Truth.

The sixth body to be taken out of the ruins of the Hotel Royal at Fortieth street and Sixth avenue was found at 9 o'clock this morning. It was found in a room on the top floor. It was apparently that of a woman, but was so badly burned as to make identification well nigh impossible.

At 9:20 the seventh body was found. It was that of a man. It was lying in a mass of ruins, and had evidently fallen with a mass of timber from an upper floor. At 10 o'clock the eighth body was found. It was that of a man. It was lying among debris in the cellar of the hotel. How many charred and mangled bodies are still buried beneath the ruins of the Hotel Royal is a question of horrible uncertainty.

Besides the three taken out this morning five others have been recovered—those of H. C. Levy, of 340 West Fortieth street and two other men and two women, the last four unidentified. The bodies of many others may lie hidden in the mass of steaming wreckage, which chokes up the wide space between the blackened and disfigured walls.

Sixty-one Are Missing.

From a careful examination of the hotel register and the journal, which was furnished by Night Clerk Underwood, the number of persons in the building when the fire broke out was 152. Of these eight are known to be dead, 81 were rescued by the firemen, assisted by citizens before the walls collapsed, and 61 are still missing.

INDIAN DAYS AND TROUBLES

A Victory for the Whites on the Detroit River.

An Apology for the Indian—The White Men Were Usurpers—Some of the Cruelties and Injustices Perpetrated by the Invaders.

(By Dr H. Scott.)

A heavily armed ship was ascending the river with men and supplies for Detroit during the seige, or about that time. The Indians kept their eyes on her movements. She was becalmed for a number of days. At length a breeze sprang up and she was slowly plowing up the current, when the wind ceased, and she again cast anchor near a small island. The captain was not free from apprehension, and accordingly ordered his men to lie concealed with their guns heavily loaded and primed. He also ordered a cannon to be loaded with grape-shot to near the muzzle, one that could be turned in any direction.

His precautions were timely, for during the night a dark cloud was seen moving on the face of the river in the direction of the ship. On it came, noiselessly but steadily. Presently it was within range of the cannon that had been turned upon it; but all the ship seemed in deep slumber. Directly the rap of a hammer on the mast gave the signal, when the ponderous vessel croaked and reeled, and seemed a volcano pouring forth her lava. A large number of the canoes were shivered; some of them were raised quite out of the water; and the slaughter of the cut-throats was fearful. The few canoes that were left paddled a hasty retreat into the darkness, and all was again quiet. The number of the canoes was supposed to have been about three hundred. The number of the killed could not be known.

Apology for the Indian.

During the early settlement of the west all children were taught to believe that Indians were naturally murderers and thieves—savages destitute of the common feelings of justice, mercy and humane affection. It was never intimated to them that injustice had been done to the red man, or that unprovoked outrages and monstrous cruelties had been perpetrated upon them by the white man. Nor were they ever told that Indians were uncivilized human beings, possessing the same attributes and affections with the white race, and that they only needed kind treatment and good faith to make of them good and true citizens. Children, therefore, grew up in the belief that Indians were even more savage and more to be dreaded than panthers and tigers. The writer shared this belief and all the prejudice growing out of it; and it has only been since he acquired a better history of the times, and some familiarity with the aborigines, that his mind has greatly changed.

It is never to be forgotten that upon the first discovery and invasion of the continent by the Europeans the aborigines held undisputed possession of the soil and all that belonged to it. The white race were therefore strictly usurpers, and should have expected resistance. Nevertheless, so far as ever known, no Indian was the first aggressor in bringing on trouble. On the contrary, in every instance, so far as ever known, the first blows were struck by the white man, which provoked retaliation in kind, but not in equal degree. The undeveloped savage legitimately retaliated by cruel revenge—even with fearful torture by fire. There may have been aggressions by the natives, but history does not furnish instances. If there have been justifiable grounds for complaint, it is found in the defective judgment of the savage in inflicting disproportionate punishment. And finally, so far as history sheds light on the subject, I think it safe to say, that had the North American been dealt with in love, mercy and justice from the first, all the horrors and massacres would have been avoided.

I take space to enumerate a few of the known acts of injustice and cruelty practiced on the Indians. As early as the year 1768, emigrants were pouring across the mountains and possessing themselves of the rich hunting grounds bordering on the upper Ohio; but evidence is wanting to show that the Indians offered any resistence prior to the atrocious murders about to be mentioned. The whites came and settled on the land without asking permission. The first acts of violence were the murders of a few Indians families who were hunting and trapping a few miles above, where Wheeling now stands.

A desperado by the name of Cresap, residing in the vicinity, collected a band of his own type and went and murdered every man, woman and child of these unoffending people, took possession of their canoes in which they placed all the plunder they could lay their hands on, and returned to their station.

Subsequently the same band of murderers heard of another small lot of trappers and hunters who were camped below the mouth of Corptana creek, and at once armed themselves and went and took the lives of every soul, and then carried away their effects. Both these outrages were perpetrated in cold blood, and so far as ever known, without the shadow of provocation. These were the beginnings of troubles which led to fearful consequences.

Not long after the tragedies just narrated, a large number of Indians came and camped on the northern bank of the Ohio, some forty miles above. Another ruffian by the name of Greathouse, took with him a small party and went to attack them. They landed on the opposite side of the river. Greathouse himself crossed over in a canoe for the purpose of reconnoitering the Indian camp. He accidentally fell in with a squaw, who proved to be friendly. He asked her to conduct him through the camp, that he might make friends with the people. She told him he had better not be seen, as they had heard of the murders by Cresap, and he might not be safe. He returned to the south side to devise plans. On the following day he succeeded in decoying over the river a number of Indians, who had no sooner landed than he had them all shot down. The Indians over the river hearing the firing, sent two men to learn the cause; but they also fell, pierced with bullets, as soon as they gained the shore. Then a large force was sent over from the Indian camp, but they were fired into before reaching the shore, and the most of them killed. The remainder retreated as rapidly as possible. Greathouse collected what canoes he could, and crossed over and killed every Indian that could be found, only very few of the whole number making their escape. In this slaughter the entire family of Logan, the great Mingo chief, was killed. Logan was ever regarded as the firm friend of the white man.

Subsequently an expedition of 400 men was sent to Pennsylvania and Virginia to operate against the Indians. They descended the Ohio as far as the mouth of the Muskingum, and up that stream as far as the site of the present Jonesville, destroying all the villages along the banks and killing every Indian they could find. Immediately succeeding the murders here referred to, attacks were made on the fortress and terrible outrages committed. The greatest alarm and consternation spread everywhere. Thousands fled from their cabins and hurried back to the old settlements for safety.

In October, 1744, Gov. Dunmore crossed the mountains with 2,000 well equipped soldiers, by the way of Fort Duquesne—Pittsburg—thence down the Ohio to the mouth of the Hocking, and up its course to near the present site of Logan, Ohio, where he turned west until he reached the Scioto river, where he strongly fortified himself near where Circleville now stands.

The Indians fearing a junction of the forces under Gen. Lewis with Lord Dunmore, and feeling their inability to meet the united armies, began to sue for peace. To this end several deputations were sent by the chief in command on the Scioto. Dunmore found the Indians everywhere enraged on account of the slaughter of their people by Cresap and Greathouse, but still willing to make peace under a consciousness of the inferiority of their own strength. In a council held with Dunmore at Pickaway Plains, Dunmore's camp, Cornplanter, a chief, made a powerful speech. He reminded the English of several treaties made by them with his people, and boldly affirmed that not one of them had been kept by the whites; while he claimed that on the part of the Indians they had faithfully lived up to them all. He said that, notwithstanding the treaties the whites had moved over onto their lands and occupied them, erected homes and cut down the forests. He reminded them of the brutal murders of their people by Cresap and Greathouse, and others. He said that notwithstanding these great wrongs, the Indians wanted peace because they knew the white race could crush them, and finally, charged the English with bringing on the war.

The renowned chief Logan declined to appear at the council, but sent his speech, written by an interpreter. This speech was subsequently published in the papers of the colonies, and also in England. It is here inserted literally. Thomas Jefferson wrote afterwards that he defied the "orations of Demosthenes or Cicero to produce a single passage superior to this speech of Logan's."

Logan's Speech.

"I appeal to the white man to say if he ever entered Logan's cabin hungry and he gave him not meat; if he came naked and he clothed him not. During the last long and bloody war, Logan remained idle in his cabin, an advocate of peace. Such was my love for the whites, that my countrymen, as they passed by, said: 'Logan is the friend of the whites.' I had thought of living among you, but for the injuries of one man. Colonel Cresap last spring, in cold blood, and unprovoked, murdered all the relations of Logan; not sparing even my women and children. There runs not one drop of my blood in the veins of any living creature. This called on me for revenge. I have sought it. I have killed many. I have fully glutted my vengeance. For my country I rejoice in the beams of peace. But do not harbor the thought that mine is the joy of fear. Logan never felt fear. He will not turn on his heel to save his life—who is there to mourn for Logan?"

Logan became a wandering misanthrope, and was at last assassinated by an Indian, through private hatred.

Governor Dunmore concluded a treaty of peace with the Indians, and after tarrying some time at his camp, which he called "Charlotte," returned to Virginia.

There have been published discrepancies as to the circumstances of

The Death of Cornstalk,

but the following is undoubtedly correct. Other troubles having sprung up, the body of the Indians became furious for bloodshed; and Cornstalk found it difficult to make any headway against their fury; himself being opposed to further hostilities. In this disposition for peace he was probably governed more by his good judgment than by his love of peace for its own sake. With these views he went to Point Pleasant to confer with Gen. Arbuckle, who was commanding there; and though he came on a mission of peace, Gen. Arbuckle thought proper to detain him as a prisoner. A son of Cornstalk came to visit him, and was likewise detained.

Soon after the arrival of the son, while Arbuckle and Officer Stewart were standing on the bank of the Kanawha, the report of a rifle startled them, as they knew that two of their men had gone over on the other side. Suddenly a man by the name of Hamilton came rushing down to the bank and said that Gilmore was killed, and begged for God's sake that they would help him. Several soldiers of the fort jumped into canoes and brought Hamilton and the body of Gilmore into the camp. Gilmore had been shot by an Indian from ambush.

This so enraged the soldiers that in defiance of the officers they rushed upon and slaughtered every Indian in the fort. When their fate was made known to them by a woman, Cornstalk counciled his son, whose name was Ellenipsico, to die like a man; and then turning himself to the soldiers, he fell, pierced with many bullets. The question whether Arbuckle could have prevented the tragedy may be considered.

Facts About Trees.

The butternut is a tree that likes best a rocky, uneven soil, and in whose shade neither shrub nor herb will thrive. The bark is used as a dye stuff for woolens. Curled and bird's eye maple is a wood of the same family that sometimes have curiously arranged fibre, one with curves, the other with eyes, hence the name. White ash is used in carriage works. It is poisonous to snakes. It is said a snake is never found in its shade. White oak timber is valued in ship building. Apple is excellent for food and fuel. Weaver's shuttles are made of the wood. Black birch timber is used in basket works, and that tree is valued by the Indians as their natural inheritance. It emits a pleasant odor when burning.

Mountain laurel wood is used in making combs. The leaves are poisonous to some animals. Black cherry timber is much valued in cabinet works. The bark is highly medicinal. The leaves, when wilted, are poisonous to cattle. Of dogwood, weaver's spools and handles of carpenter's tools are made. Witch hazel is a large and curious shrub. The small branches were formerly used for "divining rods," and an extract from it is valued in medical practice. The wood of the American aspen, or white poplar, is used in the manufacture of paper.—Home and Farm.

STOOD THE TEST.

Allcock's Porous Plasters are unapproachable in curative properties, rapidity and safety of action, and are the only reliable plasters ever produced. They have successfully stood the test of over thirty years' use by the public; their virtues have never been equalled by the unscrupulous imitators who have sought to trade upon the reputation of Allcock's by making plasters with holes in them, and claiming them to be "just as good as Allcock's," and they stand to-day indorsed by not only the highest medical authorities, but by millions of grateful patients who have proved their efficacy as a household remedy.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for Allcock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

The Educated Farmer.

The object of a general education is to develop and to train the mind without regard to the subsequent employment of it. It is true that the man who intends to practice law or medicine may take studies or follow courses of reading while in college that may contribute to the final result, but generally the process of education is simply to prepare the mind to cope with whatever may be presented to it in the course of life.

A young man just out of college returned to the farm, and a neighbor exclaimed, "What's the need of a man's going to college to learn to raise potatoes?" He might as well ask what's the need of a man's going to college to learn to amputate a limb or to make an argument in court. As already stated, education is merely preparatory. It supplies a mental factor that enables the possessor to work to greater advantage, whether he serve as lawyer, physician or farmer.

But to return to potato raising. The progressive farmer does not merely drop a potato in the earth, keep down the weeds, and dig the increase in the fall. That would be raising potatoes as the Indians raised corn. The question is, how can the potato be treated to bring the largest returns? And it is no fool question; it has taxed the minds of some of the best thinkers in this country, and the thinking of these men has resulted in more general good than all the "meetings" of the fudge-fudge school of philosophy.

Now, it is reasonable to suppose that the man who has been trained to rely on mental as well as on physical force may evolve something out of potato raising that may accrue to his own and to others' advantage. The educated mind, whether educted in college or elsewhere, is progressive and is not content with present attainments, but is ever reaching out for better results in whatever course interested or directed. A knowledge of Latin or Greek may not help potato culture directly, but the discipline of mind necessary to learn these languages may lead to an improvement of the crop.

Many persons appear to think that farming may be undertaken and carried out successfully by any man who has a little physical strength left; that he may fall back on agriculture when everything else fails, and be an easy prop to support. Nothing can be further from the truth. It is mind, or the exercise of it, that leads to success in agriculture, and it is not too much to say that the more cultivated the mind—the mind that has been subjected to the best training and discipline—is the one that will accomplish the most on a farm.

There is another reason why the farmer should be educated, or another way that an education may be a great help to a farmer. Most farmers lead monotonous lives—comparatively lonely. The farmer has less diversion than any other laborer on the face of the earth. Even if near cities or large towns, his duties keep him at home. But if he has an education, he has something to draw upon in all lonely hours, a fund of information always at his disposal. And this fund not only cheers him and helps him on to-day, but is also building him up, making him broader and more useful in the days to come.

In many parts of the country in agricultural communities, there may be a few school privileges. The district school, open only a part of the year, is all that is provided in some places. Here the educated father or mother may apply some of the educational facilities lacking, and in any case supplement public instruction with home instruction. This suggests an important topic. If children could be educated on the farm, if their interest in agriculture might grow with their interest in books, what a crop of educated farmers we might have. But children are sent to the city for their education, and this often, if not generally, spoils them for a farmer's life. They delight to return to the farm in the holidays, but having a taste of the city are eager to get back to it. Education in any department of life is a factor that pays for the getting, and the more there is on the farm, the better for the farm, the farmer, the farmer's family and the farmer's community.—George Appleton, in Farm and Fireside.

Success in journalism depends largely upon the accession of new readers. It will be a surprise to the novice to learn that with many of the best established weekly journals the proportion of annual "renewals" is less than 25 per cent. To maintain the circulation, editors have to lasso 75 per cent. of new readers every year. And, strange to say, this is not a difficult task for the man who knows how to accomplish it. But that is a secret of the business.

Brown's Teething Cordial was first prepared and used by a physician.

During the rebellion the government had 800 ships of war, such as they were. One of the cruisers of to-day could have cleaned out the entire lot, with the exception, perhaps, of the monitors.

HARMLESS.

TO ASSIST NATURE IN REMOVING Poisons from the body is the great mission of SWIFT'S SPECIFIC. Microbi cannot exist in the blood when S.S.S. is properly taken, as it promptly S.S.S. forces them out, and cures the patient. It has relieved thousands in a few days who had suffered for years.

MRS. GRAHAM'S
Cucumber and Elder Flower Cream

Is not a cosmetic in the sence in which the term is popularly used, but permanently beautifies. It creates a soft, smooth, clear, velvety skin, and by daily use gradually makes the complexion several shades whiter. It is a constant protection from the effects of sun and wind and prevents sunburn and freckles, and blackheads will never come while you use it. It cleanses the face far better than soap and water, nourishes and builds up the skin tissues and thus prevents the formation of wrinkles. It gives the freshness, clearness and smoothness of skin that you had when a little girl. Every lady, young or old, ought to use it, as it gives a more youthful appearance to any lady and that permanently. It contains no acid, powder or alkali and is as harmless as dew and as nourishing to the skin as dew is to the flower. Price $1.00. Ask your druggist for it.

SAMPLE BOTTLE mailed free to any lady on receipt of 10 cents in stamps to pay for postage and packing. Lady Agents wanted.

Chronic Diseases.

CATARRH, so very common in this climate, is not a local disease as is generally supposed, but is constitutional, showing itself locally in some of the mucous membranes of the body, and to remove it permanently you have to remove the cause. In fact the only way of treating any disease is by removing the cause that produces it, and nature will do the rest. This is the manner in which we treat all diseases under our specialties and the secret of our success is in the ability to determine the starting point or cause of your trouble.

SEMINAL WEAKNESS OR LOSS OF MANHOOD, AND ERRORS OF YOUTH, POSITIVELY CURED.

PILES permanently cured without the use of a knife or any surgical operation whatever. POSITIVELY NO CASE TAKEN THAT CANNOT BE CURED.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

Robert Hazel, the Spiritualist Exposer, at Wheeler's.

The Byrons in The Plunger at the People's—Margaret Mather.

Prof. Robert Hazel, who professes to expose all spiritualist mediums, gave an entertainment at Wheeler's last evening to a fair-sized audience.

Hazel evidently knows his business, and could give a good entertainment if he wanted to, but his performance last evening was very poor and disappointing to the people who had paid their money to see spiritualism exposed.

He exposed a very few of the tricks, and most of the time was spent in discussing matters with spiritualists in the audience. He made a challenge to expose and duplicate the tricks of any spiritualist and leaves this challenge open.

The Plunger.

The Byrons in The Plunger, open a week's engagement at the People's theater to-night. The Cincinnati Times-Star speaks of them as follows:

"The admirers of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Byron were out in force yesterday, and notwithstanding the weather without was very inviting, Havlin's theater was packed to the walls, the occasion being the opening of the engagement of The Plunger. Those who saw this interesting play at Havlin's last season can not fail to note, if they visit the theater this week, the great improvements that have been made in the arrangement of the five acts of the play.

The comedy element has been enlarged upon considerably, and the laughter that prevailed during the performance was a tribute to the cleverness of the author as well as the actors. There are several striking scenes in The Plunger, the most noteworthy being introduced in the fourth act, where a train in motion is introduced. A real rain-storm is also a feature of this scene.

Oliver Byron, in the light comedy role of Dexter Digit, the plunger, is seen to great advantage. The hearty burst of applause which greeted him on his first appearance was followed by numerous spontaneous outbursts as the play progressed. Another great hit was scored by Mrs. Kate Byron, whose representation of the character of an Irish widow is worthy of the highest praise. Mrs. Byron's brogue is of the genuine sort. Her love scene with the plunger in the third act was a gem. The witty sallies that pass between the couple were very fetching indeed. Fred Warren, as Bill Spike, the tramp, was a prime favorite. He kept the audience in a state of hilarity all the while he was on the stage. Ricca Allen's kangaroo dance made a hit. Indeed, the entire cast is deserving of praise. The Plunger will have a big week at Havlin's unless all signs fail."

Margaret Mather.

Margaret Mather's new double bill of Nance Oldfield and The Love Chase, which is to be presented at Wheeler's opera house next Thursday night, Feb. 11, is said to be one of the most marked successes of the season.

It has been said that the most noticeable portion of Margaret Mather's work this season is the absence of those crudities which the critics noticed in her earlier work. Her characterization of all the roles she essays has been marked, it is said, by a depth of feeling and grace of stage presence as well as added eloquence of reading. Her season too, is said to be in line financially with these improvements.

A TRUTH FROM "TRUTH."

The New York Central is really first-class in all its appointments. Think of it, it has four tracks laid with the heaviest of steel rails in the most substantial manner, and when you are sleeping or lounging around in one of their superb Wagner cars, and flying along at the rate of nearly a mile a minute, as some of their fast expresses do, you will hardly realize that you are moving, so excellent is the permanent way. A short time ago a special train made the run from New York to Buffalo at the rate of a mile a minute the entire distance.
